Warsaw millions cheer for Pope

Times News Services

WARSAW — Pope John Paul II, who left his native Poland seven months ago as a cardinal, returned "as a pilgrim" and Pope today and rode a wave of emotion and tumult into Warsaw, capital of a nation both Communist and Catholic.

"I come as a pilgrim," the first Polish Pope said, to a country "to which I remain deeply attached by the roots of my life, of my heart."

Perhaps three million Poles — an accurate estimate was impossible — crushed together along the pontiff's seven-mile route into the city.

As the Pope passed, almost the entire crowd fell to its knees.

Poland sent its president to the airport to welcome the first reigning Pope ever to visit a Communist country. President Henryk Jablonski's words showed the cool but correct official attitude to this visit by a Roman Catholic pontiff.

"With open arms, Your Holiness, we welcome you to your native land," Jablonski said.

In turn, the Pope reassured the Communist rulers of his homeland that his visit had been dictated by "strictly religious motives.

"I earnestly hope that my present journey in Poland may serve the great cause of rapprochement and of co-operation among nations for reconciliation and for peace in the contemporary world," he said.

Poland officially received the Pope as a head of state — the Vatican — rather than as leader of the world's 750 million Catholics.

But the people of Poland received him as one of their own.

Singing, waving throngs — thousands of them in brilliantly colored regional costumes — begged John Paul to bless rosaries and statues of the Virgin Mary.

Overnight, the people of the capital, 93 per cent Catholic like their countrymen at large, festooned Warsaw with banners and pictures of "our own Pope." They paved the streets with flowers.

The man who seven months ago was Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow rode to Warsaw's St. Johns Cathedral on the flatbed of a Polish army truck, under a canopy of yellow and white.

He paid no attention to his gilded throne, standing most of the way and waving both hands. Inside the cathedral the crush of the people was so great that restraining ropes burst.

As the 59-year-old pontiff's specially converted Boeing 727 on its flight from Rome touched down at 1:07 a.m. Victoria time at a military airport outside Warsaw, every church bell in the city pealed out.

John Paul knelt and kissed the ground at the bottom of the Alitalia jetliner's steps, then hugged and kissed tiny four-year-old Agnieszka Jurkowska, a girl who gave him a bouquet.

At the airport, in his first speech as Pope in his home country, the pontiff told a crowd estimated at 20,000: "I thank you for not having forgotten me . . . May God reward you."

Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, Poland's Roman Catholic leader, joined President Jablonski in greeting the Pope.

The 78-year-old Wyszynski, the outspoken defender of Polish Catholics, has been ill in recent weeks and appeared pale and worn as he stood beside the Pope. When he attempted to kneel, the pontiff took hold of his shoulders and raised him to his feet.

Security was strict. Army helicopters criss-crossed overhead. The military airport bristled with police and militia.

OAK BAY TEAPARTY

TYPICAL TWEEDY TYPES, tea tipplers all, were tasting their leafy brew in public again this morning as the annual two-day Oak Bay Tea Party started with a colorful parade. Festivities continued in the afternoon with skateboard and skydiving demonstrations. Sunday starts with a pancake breakfast from 7 to 9 a.m. and the fun continues all day with the Ms. Oak Bay Tea Bag competition. Outhouse and bathtub races will vie with water football and beach entertainment for the attention of spectators.

Europe up in arms at U.S. oil policy

PARIS (AP) — Western industrial countries are planning an emergency meeting next week to debate the decision by the United States to use subsidies to stockpile home heating oil.

The policy has been strongly attacked by European countries as selfish and damaging to the common fight against the oil shortage.

"Carter declares oil war," said a front-page headline in Britain's Daily Mirror on Friday.

"The hallowed principle of egoism, every man for himself, is at work," charged the Paris socialist paper Le Matin.

The International Energy Agency, comprising 20 Western countries including the United States, said it will assemble its permanent delegates to question Washington on its decision a week ago to allow a temporary subsidy of $5 a barrel to U.S. importers on some oil products, notably heating oil and diesel fuel.

The U.S. energy department says the purpose is to build up U.S. supplies of heating oil and diesel fuel. The subsidy, known as an entitlement, is paid from a pool of funds financed by oil-company contributions required by the U.S. government.

Europeans see the move as an effort to help U.S. buyers compete with spiralling oil prices on the spot market in Rotterdam, Netherlands — a crucial source of oil for Europe during the present period of shortfalls.

"In the face of crisis, Uncle Sam has reacted as usual: it is applying the law of the strong," said the Paris daily Le Figaro. It accused Washington of going behind the backs of its allies in the struggle for oil and delivering "a scandalous coup de force."

British Energy Minister David Howell asked his French counterpart, Andre Giraud, to express "profound concern" to Washington officials whom Giraud will be visiting next week.

In West Germany, The Stuttgarter Zeitung daily said Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff has sharply complained to the U.S. ambassador about the subsidies.

The paper said the move is sure to cloud Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's talks with Carter in Washington, also scheduled for next week.

The Dutch government expressed displeasure over the U.S. action, while the Danish president of the IEA, Niels Ersboell, called it tantamount "to snatching money out of our currency reserves."

Most television newscasts made the point that the U.S. consumes twice as much gasoline per capita as Europeans, at less than half the price.

The French are avowed enemies of the Rotterdam market, insisting its prices should be government-controlled and the U.S. strategy is seen here as a boost for the market.

The Rotterdam market accounts for only a few per cent of Europe's oil needs, but is valuable for covering sudden shortfalls.

In Brussels, officials of the European Common Market are reported furious at the subsidies and have issued figures in a bid to prove that the supply of oil to Europe has fallen more than twice as much as the flow to the U.S.

Recounts bring no change

OTTAWA (CP) — Party standings in the new 282-seat House of Commons are unchanged following two judicial recounts completed Friday.

A judicial recount of votes in Vancouver Centre riding has confirmed former Vancouver mayor and Liberal candidate Art Phillips as the winner in the May 22 federal election.

Phillips edged out Progressive Conservative Pat Carney by 85 votes. He is the only Liberal elected to the Commons west of Manitoba.

The final tally conducted by county court Judge David Campbell Friday showed Phillips with 15,420 votes, followed by Carney with 15,335 votes. Ron Johnson of the New Democrats was third with 13,352 votes.

In the Toronto riding of Parkdale-High Park, a judicial recount has confirmed Liberal Jesse Flis' win over the incumbent Progressive Conservative Yuri Shymko.

Meanwhile, judicial recounts are pending in two Nova Scotia ridings, both apparently won by Conservatives: Halifax and Southwest Nova.

Associated Press

Convoys of angry U.S. truckers blockaded pumps at several stations in at least two states today and said they plan to roll into Washington on Monday to protest the cost of diesel fuel.

Trucks sealed entrances to a truck stop in Southington, Conn., calling the price of fuel "outrageous and ridiculous."

The trucks rolled in to the truck stop Friday night and remained in place this morning. No violence was reported.

"It's a hoax and a farce by the oil companies," said Jack Ruppard, spokesman for the truckers. The oil companies, he said, "have oil running out of their ears."

Bob Jacks, co-owner of the truck stop, estimated there were 100 trucks blockading the station. Later, witnesses counted only about a dozen rigs actually blocking the pumps with another 50 or so in the area.

Ruppard said truckers are particularly angry that the price of diesel fuel has risen above the price of regular gasoline in some areas.

Meanwhile, 12 trucks continued a vigil near an Oklahoma City truck stop while the operator of another station agreed to a request by truckers to limit fuel sales.

The independent truckers plan to descend on the capital next week to demand deregulation of the industry and more fuel at cheaper prices.

"They (federal officials) think we're bluffing, and we're going to show them that we're not," said Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association.

Neighbor hauls man from burning house

A 28-year-old Langford man is alive today thanks largely to the quick actions of his neighbor and a Colwood RCMP policewoman.

Mark Peterson had collapsed from smoke while trying to extinguish a fire in the living room of his home at 2827 Leigh Road early this morning.

He was dragged to safety by neighbor Doug Guyatt and Constable Marlene Collins.

Fire Chief Al LeQuesne said special credit should go to Guyatt who entered the smoke-filled house and found Peterson lying on the floor of the living room. Guyatt had got as far as the kitchen when Collins arrived, and they dragged Peterson to safety.

Firemen applied oxygen and took Peterson to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated for smoke inhalation .

LeQuesne said Peterson had fallen asleep on a chesterfield while smoking a cigarette and awoke at about 4:45 a.m. to find the couch on fire.

He woke up his wife and child and they ran outside.

LeQuesne said the child suddenly realized the family cat and kittens were still in a basket behind the couch.

While Mrs. Peterson went to rescue the animals, Peterson grabbed a garden hose and tried to douse the flames.

N-protesters plan drop in

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Greenpeace demonstrators will parachute into a "major Canadian nuclear power plant" today and attempt to occupy the site in a protest against nuclear energy, an official of the conservation group said Friday.

The official, Rex Weyler, refused at a news conference to say where the protesters plan to land.

"I imagine they will all be arrested, but they will attempt to get inside the facility and occupy it," he said.

He said Greenpeace, which claims 100,000 members, is protesting among other things, Canada's policy of selling a certain type of nuclear reactor to other countries. The reactor produces materials that can be used for making nuclear weapons.

Earlier Friday, three men scaled a 60-metre transmission tower at the Darlington nuclear power plant under construction near Oshawa, Ont., one of a number of planned anti-nuclear demonstration across North America this weekend.

The men, who set up a platform about halfway up the tower, say they will not come down until Ontario Premier William Davis promises an environmental assessment study of the plant's effects and a moritorium on construction until the study is completed.

In Massachusetts, about three dozen protesters are to wind up a 130-kilometre march to Plymouth from Provincetown on Sunday. The march, organized by the Massachusetts Bay Coalition, began Thursday.

Coalition spokesman Jay Critchley said the march is designed to call attention to the danger an accident at the Pilgrim I nuclear power plant might cause .

Money smugglers getting nailed

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

U.S. Customs officers in Washington State are seizing more than a million dollars in cash and securities a year from persons attempting to smuggle money into the country.

Donald Eide, district director of customs in Seattle, told the Times Friday the illegal movement of currency across the border has become a major problem.

Under the U.S. Currency Act passed by Congress seven years ago no one can enter or leave the country with more than $5,000 in his possession unless he files a declaration.

Failure to do so may result in criminal and civil penalties including forfeiture of the money.

Eide could only speculate on the amount that flows undetected across the border but seizures are running about two a month at Blaine and slightly less at Seattle-Tacoma (Seatac) international airport, he said.

The average seizure is $20,000 to $25,000 but one person recently lost nearly a quarter million dollars in cash and negotiable certificates which he failed to declare upon arriving at Seatac from the Far East.

Eide said several Canadians have been caught, including a Vancouver man who was stopped crossing the border at Blaine in his Rolls Royce and was found to be carrying $23,000 in cash. The money and the $65,000 car were seized. The man has launched an appeal.

Eide said the law was passed primarily to stem the illegal laundering of money through foreign banks.

However, he conceded the control measure is only marginally successful as customs officers seldom check persons leaving the country.

He said the majority of cases uncovered to date have involved persons with no criminal connections and who tried to bring in money for a variety of reasons.

Some had been left money in wills of relatives in foreign countries. Others were bringing in money to attend schools or colleges.

If the customs officer feels the excuse is genuine he will allow the person to keep the money after completing a declaration.

But usually the money is seized and the person then has to apply to the customs service for relief, a procedure that can take up to a month to complete.

Whether the person will ever see his money again depends on the custom officer's review of the circumstances.

"If we think the person was trying to pull a fast one on the Internal Revenue branch, he'll be out of luck for sure," Eide said.

Weekend delayed

Weekend Magazine has not arrived in time to be included with today's paper. Instead it will appear in the daily edition of the Times as soon as it arrives next week. Saturday-only subscribers can call the circulation department at 382-3131 and a copy will be mailed to them.

Care 'on malpractice level'

ALERT BAY (CP) — The medical treatment given an 11-year-old Indian girl in the days leading up to her death was described Friday as "being on the level of malpractice" by an internal specialist and pediatrician.

Dr. June Mills of North Battleford, Sask., was testifying at an inquest into the death of Renee Smith, who died of a ruptured appendix and peritonitis on Jan. 22 — five days after she was taken to hospital complaining of severe abdominal pains.

Mills, called to testify at the request of the Nimpkish band council, said the girl's condition was such that death was inevitable unless surgery had been performed. Only very unusual extenuating circumstances could have justified failure to operate.

Dr. Jack Pickup, the doctor whose practices have become the focal point of the inquest, has testified that he had to pressure the girl's relatives to admit her to hospital, but that she was obstinate, uncooperative and refused to undergo surgery.

Mills has testified that the drugs given to Renee throughout her illness were wrong and succeeded only in masking the symptoms of her illness, leading Pickup to believe she was improving.

She said she was familiar with the problems of doctors in isolated areas such as Alert Bay. However, after 35 years of experience, Pickup should have kept more complete notes on Renee's case and properly charted the course of her illness.

Pickup would have been able to give an accurate account of Renee's condition only if she had been given a full medical examination.

The doctor, who has been accused of having a drinking problem, did not fully examine her, Mills said.

She said care given to the girl was lacking in that it did not include a rectal examination, there were incomplete X-rays and improper charting of drugs and the child's progress.

"My understanding is that there is a contract between doctor and patient for a standard of care and in this case this has fallen below acceptable standards," she said.

Mills said the College of Physicians and Surgeons of B.C. should be asked to approve the standards of medical care in Alert Bay, provision should be made to relieve Pickup of his duties from time to time and provision made that doctors also have access to medical care when they are sick.

Dr. L.A. Patterson, who had testified earlier during the inquest, said the standard of care given in the hospital was adequate.

"We wouldn't have saved this girl even in an intensive care unit," Patterson said.

The inquest continues Monday.

Australia gets sharp jolt

PERTH, Australia (ap) — The most severe earth tremor in five years jolted western Australia early today registering five on the Richter scale, authorities reported.

They said no injuries were reported and there were no immediate reports of damage.

The Mundaring Geophysical Observatory said the quake was centred at Bencubbin, 240 kilometred northeast of Perth. The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs.

Meanwhile, a series of minor earthquakes, the strongest reading 4.9 on the Richter scale, shook the autonomous Greek Orthodox monastic republic of Mount Athos early today, causing minor damage but no injuries.

Police said most of the Basilian monks spent the night in the open, afraid the ancient structures might collapse.

School kitchen closed

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The Tucson Unified School District ordered the immediate closing Friday of a central kitchen preparing meals for 35,000 to 45,000 students after a food sample showed twice the permitted level of radioactive contamination.

The contamination involved tritium — a substance used by a nearby industrial plant to make luminous signs.

Raul Grijalva, school board chairman, said he did not know how much radiation exposure students had received. The kitchen distributes food to 99 schools.

City Councilman Thomas Volgy said the problem of possible radioactive contamination had been discussed last month with AEC officials. "I was amazed because the AEC people had an incredibly cavalier attitude about the problem, that everything was cool," Volgy said.

Two ovations for Levesque as PQ meets on referendum

By KEVIN DOUGHERTY

QUEBEC (CP) — The seventh national convention of the Parti Quebecois opened Friday amid a swirl of dissent.

The 1,800 delegates at the meeting, which is to decide on the content of the sovereignty-association option the PQ government will present to voters in a referendum, had to brave about 1,000 pickets to enter the convention hall.

Premier Rene Levesque entered the hall in Laval University's sports centre through a side door.

Levesque received standing ovations before and after his opening speech to the convention, which he noted would be "the last before the referendum and the next election."

Dismissing newspaper reports describing dissent within the party, he said that the "constraints of their profession" forced reporters to look for negative things to write about.

"The Parti Quebecois is not an army of toy soldiers that marches and doesn't talk," Levesque said, explaining that differences of opinion within the PQ are a "sign of maturity."

Concern has been expressed within the party that the government is headed for losses in the referendum and the next provincial election.

The PQ lost two April 30 byelections to the Liberals, who increased their vote majorities in the seats they had held in the 1976 Quebec election.

The premier said it was natural that there was some "impatience and discontent" within party ranks, and friction between the party and the government.

Outside the hall the demonstrators included a predominantly-English-speaking group pressing for welfare rights, striking nurses and striking employees of Quebec's liquor corporation.

The premier recounted his government's accomplishments, such as partial no-fault automobile insurance, changes to the Labor Code and legislation making French Quebec's official language, drawing comparisons with the opposition Liberals.

The Liberals express concern for individual freedoms now, he said, but in 1970 they asked for the imposition of the War Measures Act, which led to searches and arrests without warrants.

Levesque said that after 12 years of "meetings in smoke-filled basements" the PQ is eager for the referendum. "I'm getting impatient myself."

But, he said, he is confident that once the vote is held "the project will be achieved."

Complaint on tires

OTTAWA (CP) — Vehicle owners who have experienced problems with Uniroyal steel-belted radial tires have been urged to contact the road safety branch of Transport Canada.

The department made the request today after investigating 74 consumer complaints about Uniroyal tires in the last year.

An investigation of Uniroyal steel belted radial tires is under way in the United States.

The road safety branch is at: Place de Ville, Ottawa K1A 0N5.

TO THE RESIDENTS OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF ESQUIMALT

The members of the Esquimalt Police Union had hoped to present and dedicate a plaque to you, the residents of the Municipality, at the official opening ceremonies of the new Public Safety Building. Much to our dismay we were advised by the Committee responsible for organizing the ceremonies that a plaque as shown here in this space was not appropriate for such an event.

We the members of the Esquimalt Police Union feel, however, that you the residents of the Municipality are deserving of the thanks of our association for your support in the completion of the Esquimalt Public Safety Building.

We therefore take this opportunity to say a sincere THANK YOU.

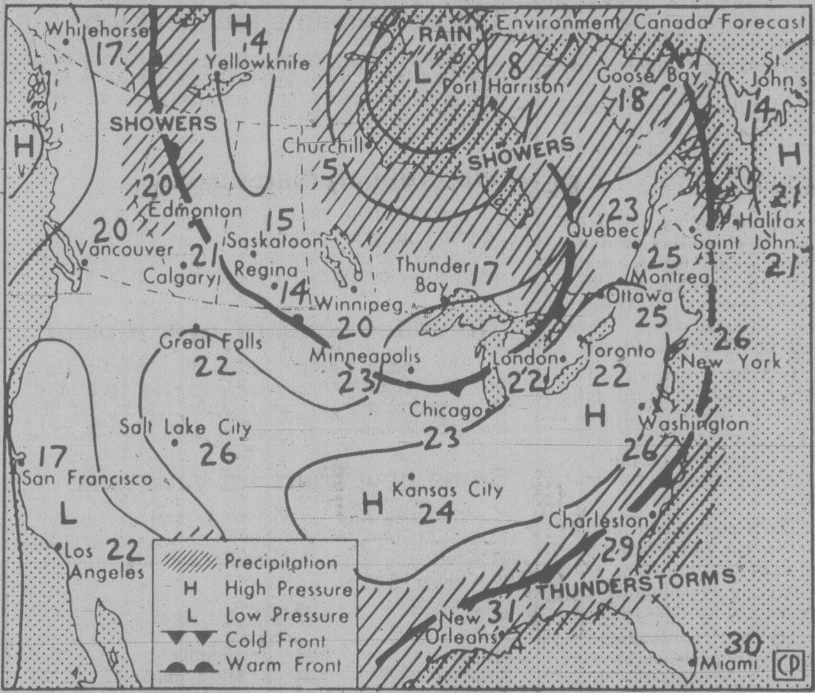
the weather



Map valid until noon Sunday

The warm high pressure ridge over the province has weakened across the northern parts. Cloudy skies will persist over the northern communities with patchy precipitation for the north coast. For southern B.C., skies will remain mostly sunny and warm today. Some cloudiness is expected sunday as the high pressure ridge continues to weaken and thus allowing minor disturbances to affect the southern areas.

Nazi shells found

MOSCOW (AP) — Authorities in western Byelorussia ordered the evacuation of tens of thousands of persons 10 days ago so the military could remove 1,000 Nazi artillery shells filled with a chemical warfare agent, the newspaper Izvestia reported today.

The discovery was made late on May 24 when a team of Soviet workers planning to build a vegetable storehouse in a vacant field discovered the area was filled with artillery shells.

The workers found a dark brown liquid oozing from some of the shells, which bore German markings identifying the contents as chemical warfare material. Officials ordered the evacuation of residents near the heavily populated town of Baranovichi,

For the next two days, radio, television and newspaper announcements ordered residents in the area to leave their homes, schools, hospitals and places of work by 8 a.m. on May 26.

The army removed 963 shells the same day and there was no report of injuries, the newspaper said.

"Military experts established that all of the shells were chemical warfare shells," Izvestia said.

Village attacked

RANGOON (AP) — Pro-Communist Shan rebels attacked a village in eastern Burma on May 14, set fire to a number of huts and bayoneted or beat to death 45 villagers, the state-owned Vanguard newspaper reported Tuesday.

Elderly women jump to death to escape team of con artists

NEW YORK (AP) — Two elderly sisters jumped six floors to their deaths Friday after being threatened and harassed for two weeks by swindlers attempting to bilk them out of their life savings of $17,000.

The bodies of Lee Young, 68, and Martha Young, 72, were found in the front courtyard of their apartment building in The Bronx, police said.

Neighbors said that in the last few days the women had become increasingly fearful because con artists were trying to exert pressure on them to withdraw their money from the bank and invest it in a fraudulent investment scheme.

The two sisters described the confidence scheme last Saturday evening to their close friend Sally Elliott, 68, and her son, Michael, 29. They gave the following account:

Two weeks ago, Lee Young met an attractive young woman on the street who asked where the nearest off-track betting office was located.

After Miss Young replied, the woman said: "You look like an honest person. I think I can trust you. A truck just came by and a bag of money fell out of it."

The woman then showed her a full sack with $50 and $100 bills on top. When the woman asked Miss Young what to do, the elderly woman told her to return the money. But the young woman suggested that she call her boss, a Mr. Goldberg.

The two women went to a telephone booth and talked to Mr. Goldberg. The conversation eventually turned to how Miss Young could invest $12,000 for a return of $25,000.

In subsequent discussions, the sisters were told that their initial investment had to be $17,000 instead of $12,000.

When the sisters went to the bank to withdraw their money, bank officers stalled them, and then telephoned the police department's senior citizen's unit, a standard procedure in such cases.

Police dissuaded the sisters from the investment, and had them move the money to a different account.

But then, the pressure began. The sisters received threatening phone calls. They thought people were following them. Their doorbell rang in the middle of the night.

"They were prisoners in their own apartment," Elliott said. "They were afraid to go out. They (the confidence people) were threatening them."

Arabs march afresh

KHORAMSHAHR, Iran (AP) — More than 2,000 Arab demonstrators, shaking their fists and shouting "Long live Arabestan!" today marched through this city, Iran's largest port, as armed revolutionary guards stood by but did not fire.

The autonomy-minded Arabs want Khuzestan province renamed Arabestan.

Earlier today, armed men that the police said were Arabs attacked a Khoramshahr police station and a political office, wounding a guard and then fleeing.

The official Pars news agency, meanwhile, said nine more members of the shah's former regime were executed today by revolutionary firing squads.

The latest executions, including those of three generals, brings the death toll by firing squads to at least 255 since the revolution toppled the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February.

On Friday, militiamen crouched behind sandbagged rooftop positions fired down on Arab protestors in the streets of this oil port city.

Reporters said ambulances carried away three of the protestors.

There were no official casualty figures.

Local Arab religious leader, the Ayatollah Taher al Sobei Khaghani, said Friday government jets and helicopters attacked five Arab villages on the outskirts of the city. Iranian military officials denied the claim, but revolutionary guards would not permit reporters into the area.

Police said the guard wounded in today's shooting also was an Arab, but that he was watching over the offices of the Arab Moslem Tribal Organization, which supports the government of the Ayatollah Khomeini.

The Moslem Arabs, a minority in the Persian-dominated Moslem nation, are demanding more autonomy in this oil-rich province in southwest Iran, a greater share of the oil profits and the ouster of the Kuzestan governor-general, Ahmad Madani.

The dispute between the Persian government and the autonomy-seeking Arabs exploded into armed battles Wednesday.

At least 25 persons were killed in fighting Wednesday and Thursday in the oil centres of Abadan and Ahwaz.

The state radio, however, reported today that only three people were dead and four wounded in the clashes in Abadan, the site of the world's largest oil refinery.

Oil industry sources said operations at the refinery were not affected.

In Khoramshahr, Arab militants issued an ultimatum to government authorities, demanding that Mandani be fired and then tried.

Dustman has Rolls

Garbage collector Andrew Hodgkiss in Oldham, Eng., drives to work every day in one of his two cars — a Bentley or a Rolls-Royce.

"I get strange looks from pedestrians and other motorists when I step out of my car dressed in my dustman's clothes," laughs 26-year-old Hodgkiss. "But I don't care." His wife Pauline, 24, is also a car buff: "I enjoy polishing the hood of the Rolls. There's no car with a hood like a Rolls."

Fugitive polygamist leader, Ervil LeBaron, wanted on murder and conspiracy charges, has been arrested, the FBI said Friday. LeBaron, head of the polygamist Church of the Lamb of God in Salt Lake City, is wanted on murder and conspiracy charges in connection with the death of Utah polygamist Rulon Allred in 1977.

Hungarian-born film director Jan Kadar, who won the Academy Award for best foreign film in 1966 for The Shop On Main Street, died Friday in Holywood after a brief illness. He was 61. Another Hollywood death Friday was that of John Barry, who won an Oscar award for his production design for the movie Star Wars. He was in his 40s.

Joan Little, whose murder trial for the icepick slaying of a jailer drew worldwide attention, probably will be released from prison in early October, a correction department official said Friday in Raleigh, N.C..

Jean Ronald Getty, son of late billionaire J. Paul Getty, has filed suit in Los Angeles claiming he receives only $3,000 a year from his father's family trust while his brothers each receive $11 million a year.

Former governor-general Jules Leger was sworn in as a member of the Privy Council Friday at a private ceremony attended by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau in one of his last official functions as head of the government.

Al Waxman, star of CBC's comedy television series The King of Kensington, has been elected the Canadian Cancer Society's national campaign chairman.

Finally, good news for those who were afraid Toronto had lost the prudery for which is has been famous. Lovers' Bench, a $100,000 sculpture by Lea Vivot of two nude lovers embracing, with a naked woman sitting next to them, has been quietly removed from outside a downtown shopping concourse after a number of people complained about it, and now sits on a street in Montreal. "People don't have as many hang-ups in Montreal," Vivot said.

'Jeans not genius'

Folksinger Gordon Lightfoot said the honorary doctor of laws degree he received Friday at Peterborough's Trent University must be in for the quantity of his work — not its quality. "All the other people, of course, really earned the degree," said Lightfoot, wearing frayed jeans under his ceremonial gown. Others given honorary degrees at the same time included Dr. Mary Nothway, a pioneer child psychologist.

Tarzan 75 and yelling

"Just because he gives the Tarzan yell once in a while — that's a sign of good health to me," says Lisa Weissmuller, daughter of Johnny Weissmuller, filmdom's best-known ape man whose jungle calls got him in trouble at the Hollywood hospital where he was recovering from strokes. Weismuller is 75 today, and he's also celebrating a court victory over attempts to have him transferred to a mental home.

THE WILLARD E. IRELAND SCHOLARSHIP FUND

The Willard E. Ireland Scholarship Fund has been established by friends and admirers of the late Provincial Archivist and historian to assist promising young students who wish to pursue their careers in history and music.

The Fund's objective is $25,000 to be used to endow scholarships of $1,000 each in Music and History at the University of Victoria. Of that amount, $10,000 has already been subscribed by Dr. Ireland's family.

The Music Scholarship will be awarded annually to an outstanding student entering the university's School of Music. The History Scholarship will be awarded to an outstanding student completing the third year of a major honours program in History, with preference being given to a student specializing in Canadian History. In both cases, the recipients will be chosen by the Senate Committee on Awards on recommendations from the faculty concerned.

The scholarships are viewed as a most appropriate and meaningful way to honor a British Columbian whose lifetime as a teacher, historian, librarian, archivist and public servant had brought him such wide recognition both at home and abroad.

To contribute to this scholarship fund, please return this form with your donation. Receipts for income tax purposes will be issued for all gifts.

Medical insurance

With more and more doctors emigrating to the United States or opting out of medicare, some Canadians have been pessimistic enough about our medical and hospital insurance system to begin drafting its obituary, little more than a decade after it was established.

There are serious problems. Health care gets more expensive with every new and complicated test and wonder drug that the phrmaceutical companies can devise. New pieces of electronic gadgetry come on the market every year guaranteed to save lives, but which cost perhaps a million dollars per copy.

Governments are trying to come to grips with rising costs, but it is a highly unpopular task. What politician likes to be accused of pinching pennies in a matter of life and death? He would much rather preside at the ribbon-cutting ceremonies opening a new hospital wing or hand over a cheque for a new X-ray unit than be forced to take the difficult decisions closing down an old, underused hospital or taking a hard line on fee negotiations with the doctors.

But as serious as the health care crisis is in this country, Canada remains one of the best places in the world to get sick in.

In the neighboring United States, falling ill is an expensive, sometimes catastrophic occurrence. A patchwork of commercial health insurance plans leave an estimated 20 million Americans without any coverage at all. And those who are covered and and run up bills of $30,000 or $40,000 — a not uncommon total for repairing the damage of a heart attack, say — often find their policies cancelled, just like a driver who totals his convertible and discovers he is now a bad risk in the the automobile insurance industry. Health care should be exempt from such mercenary tactics? That's what Canada decided a decade ago, but the marketplace still dictates what kind of medical treatment you'll receive in the U.S.

It is so bad that President Jimmy Carter has finally acted on a 1976 campaign promise to institute national health insurance. Though details are still being drafted, it is a pale copy of medicare as we know it. Canadians are upset about possible user fees for doctor's visits? Hang onto your medical plan card — Carter's scheme probably will have a $2,500 deductible clause. In case of "catastrophic" medical expenses, the plan would pay a family's medical expenses only after they have spent that much money.

Even the gloomiest prognosis for Canada's medicare scheme does not envision such drastic measures. Our problems seem insignificant by comparison.

Think shrink

Unlikely as it may seem, somewhere out there is an administrator — and a public administrator at that — who is not trying to expand his empire. His name is Charles Gallagher, he is the manager of the B.C. Ferry Corp. fleet, and his thoughts on Vancouver Island transportation are more brutally realistic than anything else heard in a long time.

Gallagher attended a recent transportation seminar sponsored by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce. He heard local businessmen and transportation executives talk about the need for hydrofoils and jetfoils, for STOL aircraft and more seaplanes, for more regular air service and more ways to get tourist cars here.

Gallagher listened to them all. Then he got up and asked two questions: First, where are we going to obtain all the necessary gasoline to fuel these new transport links, and second, where are we going to get the money to pay for them?

Both are essential questions. It is easy to talk of the need to provide good Vancouver-Victoria commuter service and to offer transportation facilities to encourage tourist to come here. It is already much harder to find ways of paying for those facilities. And in a few years, it may be harder yet to find ways of obtaining fuel for them — and for the cars that some of them (the ferries) are supposed to carry.

Take, for example, the question of a STOL (short take-off and landing) commuter service. The Dash-7 STOL planes are doubtless fast and quiet, and would carry 50 commuters across Georgia Strait efficiently. But each plane is costs nearly $6 million, and a service would also require a new airport to be created out of the sea near Work Point. Private industry might pay for the airplanes, but undoubtedly taxpayers' dollars would be required to pay for the airport.

Or, take Gallagher's own corporation, B.C. Ferries, the transport company that would certainly lose the most business in any gasoline shortage. Gallagher points out that the company has just spent $200 million for new ferries, and will need $500 million more to meet current projected demands for car ferries for the next 10 years — that's more than $200 for every B.C. resident.

With tax dollars already tight, it's not an encouraging prospect.

Victoria probably does need some improvements in transportation facilities, with costs and benefits carefully worked out to ensure the greatest possible benefit to the economy and people of this area.

But to get that benefit, the transportation industry also needs someone like Charles Gallagher, an expert who, in his own words, "thinks shrink."

JAMES RESTON

What does security mean?

WASHINGTON — More officials are making more speeches in this country these days than ever before, most of them speeches manufacturd by people who don't deliver them. But occasionally somebody cries out from the heart on a subject of world significance.

Robert McNamara, president of the World Bank and former secretary of defense, made such a speech at the University of Chicago the other day. He asked a simple question: What do we mean by the "security" of the nation? How do we build a safer world for our children — with more and more weapons or with more ideas and imagination?

☐ "A society can reach a point at which additional military expenditure no longer provides additional security," he said. To the extent that such military expenditure severely reduces the resources available for other essential investment and social services, "it can erode security rather than enhance it."

Huge expenditures

☐ "Global defense expenditures have grown so large that it is difficult to grasp their full dimensions," he said. "The nations of the world are now spending over $400 billion a year on military defence. An estimated 36 million men are now under arms in regular and paramilitary forces, with another 25 million in reserves, and another 30 million civilians in military-related occupations."

☐ Even public expenditure on weapons research and development world-wide, he said, now approach $30 billion a year — more than is spent on research for the production of fuel, health, education and food combined.

☐ Meanwhile, he pointed out, more than a billion human beings in the developing countries are living in misery and degradation, and this, he insisted, is not only a moral indictment of the rich countries, but a missed economic opportunity, since even now the United States exports more to the developing countries than it does to western Europe, eastern Europe, China and the Soviet Union combined.

☐ McNamara's conclusion: Our definition of security is out of date. Unless there is a different allocation of resources in the industrial nations from military development to human development in the poorest nations, "We shall not have a peaceful world . . . we cannot build a secure world upon a foundation of human misery."

This is not of course, a new theme. In fact, McNamara developed the same theme even more eloquently before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Montreal in 1966. It remains, however, perhaps the fundamental issue of our time — how are we to spend our vast resources for the security of our nation, our civilization, and the peace of the world?

ROBERT McNAMARA
. . . proposes a new definition

This would seem to be a relevant question when Washington is talking about controlling the arms race, the supply of fuel, and the inflation of almost everything. But you cannot get an objective and coherent debate on this theme in the Senate of the United States.

Senators will talk for a month this year about "security" without ever defining what it is. It is simply taken for granted by most senators that "security" means having more and superior modern U.S. weapons than the Soviet Union. The failure of our superior arms in Vietnam and the conquest of the shah's awesome military arsenal in Iran by an angry, hungry, religious mob are either ignored or dismissed as a failure to use the modern weapons more efficiently.

Accordingly, the presiding issues of "security" here in Washington now are not whether the military budget should be cut but whether it should be raised; not whether congress should increase appropriations to relieve the alarming human misery of the poorest nations, but whether it should reduce them; not whether our military budget contributes to inflation, but whether we can afford the inflationary costs of an effective national health service for our own people.

What have we gained by this preoccupation and increasing expenditure or military arms? McNamara asked in Chicago.

"Greater scurity?". No, he said. We are out of date. The concept of security itself has become dangerously oversimplified.

Greater risk

"It is imperative that we understand this issue clearly . . . The point is not that a nation's security is relatively less important than other considerations. Security is fundamental. The point is simply that excessive military spending can reduce security rather than strengthen it. At these exaggerated levels (it provides) only greater risk, greater danger and greater delay in getting on with life's real purposes . . ."

Mcnamara will be 63 next month. He has retained influence here longer than anybody else in the old Kennedy and Johnson cabinets primarily because he has stuck to his work for 11 years as president of the World Bank — a job he got, ironically, because Johnson sensed his sincere if tardy opposition to the Vietnam war and wanted him out of the Pentagon.

But occasionally he does speak out and he is entitled to a hearing. He has dealt with military defence and the social conflicts of the world longer than any other prominent official of our time, but congress will not debate his theme and even the press gives it very little attention.

Electoral reform, part II
A proposal for change

Last week this column outlined some of the imbalances of our voting structure and the problems they present: the fact that the party that gained the highest proportion of the popular vote in the May 22 federal election (the Liberals) did not form the government, the fact that in western Canada especially, politics is becoming an extremist two-party system with little room for the middle ground, the fact that regional polarization is becoming ever more pronounced on the national scene (the Liberals in their Quebec stronghold, the Tories a force mostly in the west).

To institute an entirely new voting system in Canada would be a Herculean task; yet perhaps the systems of some other countries could be adapted to avoid some of these problems.

One possibility might be to move to a system of partial proportional representation instead of a straight constituency representation system. This system seems to work well in some western European countries.

The essential point of the new system is that only half our MPs would be elected to represent specific ridings. The other half would be elected through the proportion of the popular vote that was given to each party on a straight vote asking the question: Which party would you like to see as government of the country?

A party that got 40 per cent of the the popular vote would get 40 per cent of the proportional seats; a party that got 20 per cent of the popular vote would get 20 per cent of the proportional seats, and so on.

If Canada were to maintain the same size House of Commons as now, 141 MPs would be elected through the constituency process and another 141 through the proportional representation process. New constituency boundaries would be outlined, each containing about twice as large a population as the current ridings. These constituencies seem large for one MP to cover, but most of these MPs would be able to devote a large proportion of their time to servicing their riding because they would not be cabinet ministers or shadow cabinet ministers.

The ministerial ranks would probably be drawn from the proportional list which, in other countries, works this way. Each party would draw up a list of 141 persons whom it would like to see elected and would arrange them in order of priority. The party leader always heads the list and is normally followed, in order, by the persons the leader and party would expect to be in the cabinet were the party elected to government.

Because the party itself chooses these lists, it can arrange them so as to avoid regional imbalances. In picking a proportional list, for example, Joe Clark could have put half a dozen or more Quebecers in his top 30, the ones he knew under any circumstances were going to get elected. These people would then have been available for cabinet posts, and Clark would have been spared the problem of having to dig up some senators so as to have francophones represented in his cabinet.

Through this system, party leaders are also able virtually to guarantee the election of persons with special skills they believe are essential for a cabinet. A leader's first choice for finance minister, for instance, could be put high up the list, ensuring a qualified person to take this job.

It is also sometimes advantageous that persons elected through the party list do not have specific responsibility for a constituency; this means that cabinet ministers can devote full time to cabinet duties rather than also having to try to sort out constituents' problems with pensions, income taxes and baby bonuses.

Those at the bottom of the list know they don't stand a chance of being elected, but parties put on the list old warhorses whom they wish to honor for loyalty and young Turks who want to get their names known.

The party lists are published prominently before the election. When the voter goes to the ballot box, he votes twice — once for the candidate in his riding and once just for the party. This also gives voters the freedom to vote for a particularly good individual candidate in their home riding, even if they would prefer a different party as government.

When the votes are tabulated, the proportional seats are allocated on the basis of the percentage each party gets of the popular vote. One problem that sometimes arises with this system is a proliferation of splinter parties who know they can get a seat or two with very few popular votes. However, this could be overcome by building into the system a requirement that a party receive a certain percentage of the vote (five per cent, say, or even eight or 10 per cent) before it would be considered in determining the proportional seats.

It's interesting to see what the composition of the House would be if the May 22 election had been carried out under this system. Assuming that each party would have received the same proportion of the constituency seats, the Tories would have ended up with 68 members elected on a riding-by-riding basis. The Liberals would have received 57 MPs, the NDP 13, and the Creditistes three.

In the proportional representation battle, however, the Liberals would have gained the most seats, 56, with the Tories getting 51. The big gainers, however, would have been the NDP who would have won 24 seats and the Creditiste who would have won an extra 10.

Final standings in the House would then have been: Tories 119; Liberals 113; NDP 37; and Creditistes 13. It's an interesting theory. — B.McL.

Deer Hunter

We were glad to read Peter Arnett's article Deer Hunter: That's Not How It Was in Vietnam (Times, May 26). We have just returned from two months in China and Thailand. In Bangkok we saw the film, which was made in Thailand. Far from being an anti-war film, it seemed to us to be a rationalization for a war that is continuing.

Arnett points out that this film with its sadistic theme of Russian roulette, is a "bloody lie" which distorts and simplifies a complex war into a battle between naturally good Americans and senselessly cruel Asians. The fundamental economic and political issues of the war are reduced to a racist morality — the effect of the film being to help Americans forget their doubts about the policies that have already cost them so much in Southeast Asia.

In Thailand people are bitter and fearful. The landless poor are multiplying in the countryside while a corrupt military government in Bangkok spends U.S. aid on luxury items and political suppression. The underlying economic problems are not being solved, as Russia and the U.S. pour weapons into the area. The agonies of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos are spreading and the war has now reached the borders of China and Thailand. The war in Vietnam has not ended; it is about to be duplicated in Thailand.

The Oscars awarded to Deer Hunter indicate that many Americans have not yet learned the lessons of Vietnam. Instead of supporting economic reforms and elections in Southeast Asia, since the 1950s the U.S. has opted for dictatorship and military aid. The war has fuelled inflation in the west but worse, has devastated the economies of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, killing a generation of leaders and intellectuals and brutalizing the survivors.

Cambodia, its population of eight million reduced to five million by the American-inspired war, had its economy brutally but rapidly restored by a government mistrustful of the world. Its refusal to give in to Vietnam's demands led to Vietnamese invasion. But the Vietnamese hopes of early victory have disappeared and Cambodia, far from being a rice basket for the 50 million Vietnamese, has only intensified the economic crisis of Vietnam and spread starvation throughout Indochina. China's punishment has added another crippling blow.

So the war started by French colonialists and continued by American business interests goes on. Rather than solve the starvation with aid and technicians the Americans and Russians provide guns and military advisors. As the Buddhist peoples of Southeast Asia grow hungrier and more desperate they become more brutal and violent.

Deer Hunter does not help Americans understand the causes of this growing war so that they can build peace. Instead it glorifies killing and helps add to the insensitivity of our society. It is not an anti-war movie, but a war movie, its director another militarist who deserves condemnation rather than Oscars. — Char Davies and Graeme Taylor, 2575 Estevan Avenue.

Wolf-loving farmer?

It seems that once again we are headed for a wolf controversy. In his last speech as minister of agriculture, Cyril Shelford stated that society is on the wrong track in protecting the wolf. His "steak on the table or wolf howl in the valley" attitude is just as emotional as he accuses society of being, no thanks to Farley Mowat's Never Cry Wolf.

We all know by now that the wolf has been the object of man's scorn for thousands of years and that there really isn't any hope of saving many doomed species. But let's hear both sides of the story. Are there any former farmers out there who could fill your readers in on the truth? All we seem to hear from the authorities are different ignorant views, mostly detrimental to the wolf. — Osmo Joronen, 204-450 Simcoe Street.

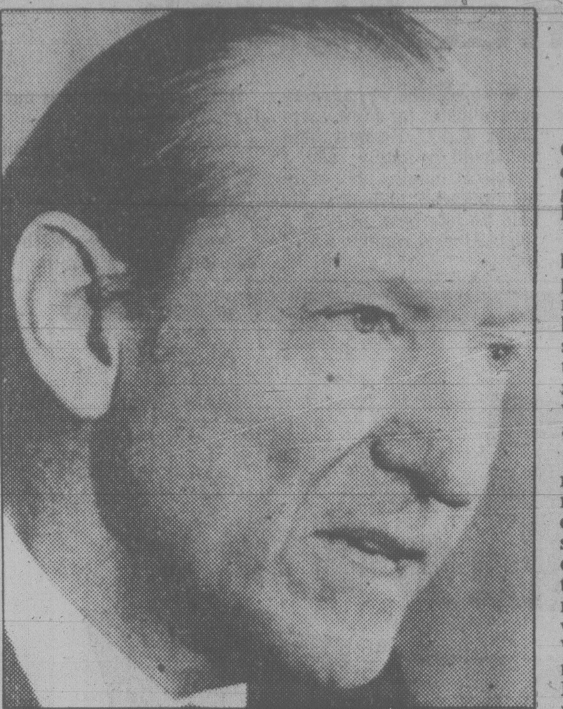
Made me sick

We are all intrigued to some extent by the private lives of celebrities, but the CP article, Catherine Lifts Spirits as Clark Bus 'Hungover', (Times, May 28) tore it.

There are certain things of which one does not speak publicly and filling an airsickness bag with vomitus is one. Your lack of judgment in running this article, without at least editing it for taste is, I am sure, a great insult to Ms. McTeer, her husband and to me.

One function of the press is to elicit responses, but by such shoddy means is inexcusable. — Peter Hertzberg, 1178 Rhoda Lane.

UN's top man comes out of closet



WALDHEIM . . . month-long public peace mission

By M. W. BROWNE
New York Times

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim completed an unprecedented global peace-making tour last month.

At the beginning of the trip he said he hoped mainly to plant the seeds of agreements which might later bloom in their proper season. Whatever the results, the month-long trip itself has many diplomats wondering whether something new is afoot at the United Nations.

Waldheim, who has been a relatively inconspicuous secretary general since his election to the post in 1971, seemed to have abruptly changed his approach to international diplomacy, and many were wondering what will come of his new posture. Would he imbue the tarnished image of the United Nations with new luster, or would he merely suffer a series of blunt rebuffs, further reducing the prestige of the world body?

Waldheim planned his trip with as ambitious a list of objectives as any predecessor had ever taken on at one stroke. They included the bloody border confrontation between China and Vietnam, the continuing state of war between North and South Korea (the 1953 ceasefire was only an armistice), the Soviet-backed Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia, the Middle East quagmire, stalemate in Cyprus and growing hostility between rich and poor nations. Eschewing his usual distaste for public diplomacy, he brought along nine United nations correspondents on the most sensitive, Asian leg of his trip, and kept them personally briefed about his general progress.

What had brought about the change? In 1971 Waldheim was elected despite the mistrust and, in some cases, hostility of many of the so-called Third World nations to the selection of any European to succeed U Thant of Burma as secretary general. Furthermore, as a conservative politician in Austria, he was suspect to many Communist and Socialist delegates.

Actively opposed by China, among others, both in his first bid and for re-election, his survival appeared to reflect a general feeling that he would quietly accept the outcome of all debates and resolutions, avoiding personal involvement in issues and never initiating action. The role seemed suited to a European diplomat of the old school, practised in the art of staying afloat by remaining inconspicuous in the midst of turmoil.

During his tenure, wars have come and gone, but the United Nations remained mired in posturing and polemics, with rarely more than a peripheral role in peace-making. On his trip he confided to reporters his growing frustration with the world organization's inability to act effectively on issues of war and peace. In crisis after crisis, action by the Security Council was blocked by vetoes from one or another of its five permanent members, and the effectiveness of the General Assembly was nearly always blunted by the sterile polemics of many of its 120 member delegations.

Dithered

While the United Nations dithered, great issues continued to be resolved as in the past by armed force or by the kind of great-power deals engineered on the Kissinger shuttle trips and more recently at Camp David.

Waldheim apparently decided to act earlier this year, following the Soviet-backed Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia and China's subsequent invasion of Vietnam. Despite an urgent need for international peace-keeping measures, the United Nations response was more polemics and two Soviet vetoes blocking authorization for the secretary general to try to mediate the complicated dispute. He decided to exercise the mandate under the United Nations charter empowering a secretary general to act as he deems appropriate to try to keep the peace. Barred from war-torn Cambodia, he resolved to visit Peking and Hanoi and, because of interlocking regional issues, to go to most of the key countries involved, including the Soviet Union.

While there was little open reaction at United Nations headquarters, enthusiasm seemed notably lacking, and several capitals hinted that his mission would not be entirely welcome. Recalling the resentment spawned by some of former secretary general Dag Hammerskjold's peacemaking initiatives in Africa, some delegates said they hoped Waldheim would not make the same mistakes. Many were simply skeptical that a European diplomat who wears pin-striped suits and scrupulously avoids offending the sensibilities of even the most abrasive interlocutors could effectively deal with tough leaders schooled in war and backed by great powers.

Undaunted

"Old gut fighters like Pham Van Dong (prime minister of Vietnam) and Kim Il Sung (the North Korean president) will eat him alive," one said.

Undaunted, Waldheim made his trip and was received everywhere with the pomp and ceremony generally accorded only to chiefs of state of friendly and important nations. He was candid in assessing his own role: "I have absolutely no illusions that this trip can resolve all the conflicts at a stroke. The issues and hostilities go back deep into history, and in any case, no outsider can persuade antagonists to make peace against their will. What I can do in a very quiet way is talk to the leaders involved, point out some potential approaches to mediation, and offer myself in helping the antagonists reach out to each other in any way possible."

How far he succeeded is hard to gauge, but in each capital he was politely told his trip had been useful and was invited to continue his efforts, provided they did not imply that the United Nations as a body was directly involving itself. In Hanoi, Peking, Pyongyang and Seoul, leaders conferred with him for much longer than programmed.

Some United Nations insiders are not entirely conviced by Waldheim's denials that his trip was intended to improve his chances for re-election when his term ends in 1981, or that he might be considering re-entering Austrian politics. But all seem to accept his contention that "my reception even in the countries involved in the Indochina dispute and the two Koreas went far better than I had dared to hope."

Waldheim's new style still seems far removed from the self-assured merriment of a Henry Kissinger applauding a belly dancer, but a number of diplomats in Southeast Asia and at the United Nations told newsmen they had begun to see him in a new light.

A push for social reforms?

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — Whatever the final party standings after all the recounts are through, the combined Liberal and NDP representation in the new Parliament will certainly add up to the strongest Opposition ever on social issues.

Social policy has never ranked at the top of the Conservative party's list of concerns, and that was manifestly evident in its performance in the last Parliament.

The Liberals, by contrast, will have four former ministers of national health and welfare in their Opposition ranks — Monique Begin, Marc Lalonde, John Munro and Allan MacEachen.

And the new-look NDP caucus, thanks particularly to its west-coast additions, should be far stronger on social issues than was last Parliament's skeletal version. The B.C. newcomers include several activist social workers and a former community clinic "poverty lawyer."

Although the NDP has long prided itself on social policy trail-blazing, the truth, in recent years, has been that its federal caucus has lagged somewhere behind even the Ottawa bureaucracy when it came to recognizing new issues and advancing new answers.

As long as the New Democrats shared the Opposition benches with the Tories, they weren't in much danger of being upstaged. With the Liberals as neighbors, however, things could be different.

The Liberal party invariably rediscovers its reforming zeal in the periods when it is relegated to the Speaker's left hand. And this should be particularly true for the present caucus.

The seats the Liberals lost were largely either rural, small urban or, in metropolitan areas, suburban — the kind occupied by the party's most conservative members.

What kept Trudeau and Company's southern Ontario losses from becoming a rout was that, in every major city, the ethnic, working class downtown ridings held firm. In Toronto, Hamilton, London, Windsor and Ottawa, the members from the most reform-minded constituencies were returned.

JEWETT . . . common cause?

The last time the Liberals and NDP shared the Opposition benches was the early '60s, when the two co-existed relatively co-operatively in confronting the Diefenbaker government. Whether they will work together equally well this time will be interesting to see.

One area where collegiality could well develop is on women's issues.

In the last Parliament, only two of the nine women in the House were in the Opposition, and both were Conservatives. This time the number of female members will be 11, with nine of them — seven Liberals and two New Democrats — being found in the Opposition ranks.

Although they are wearing different party labels, it doesn't seem unreasonable that, for example, Monique Begin, the one-time chief of staff of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, and Pauline Jewett, the former head of the Canadian Research Institute for the Advancement of Women, might find it possible to make common cause.

In a majority Parliament, the quality of the Opposition may make little real difference. With its power in numbers, a government can ignore solid objections as readily as spurious ones.

Not so in a minority House.

Joe Clark may intend to govern as if he had a majority, but the fact is that he doesn't. The majority in the new Parliament will be an opposition majority.

Where that could be particularly important is in the committees of the House, where legislative proposals must receive clause-by-clause approval, and can be extensively re-written in the process.

The result, if the opposition parties are of like mind and able to work in concert, could be something similar to the U.S. system where "the president proposes, but Congress disposes." Conservative initiatives could emerge from the new Parliament with a distinctly Liberal-NDP stamp.

That prospect may not particularly delight Prime Minister-elect Clark, but having championed the cause of a strengthened role for parliamentary committees, it may not entirely dismay him either.

Standing idly by with positive look

Politicians of all stripes and ilks like to put on a grim look and warn the Soviet Union that the United States will not "stand idly by" if the Soviets seek to take advantage of the turmoil in Iran.

Bystanding, usually the occupation of the innocent, gains a connotation of cowardice when the term is combined with "idle" — to "stand idly by" is always presented as something one should not do, and is often used when it may not be wise to say what one may do.

At a time when United States foreign policy often counsels restraint, there is a need — not quite a crying need, but a need — for a phrase that puts restraint in positive terms.

To illustrate: Throughout the presidential campaign of 1968, a favorite Nixon applause line was "America must remain number one"; came responsibility in the White House in 1969, some other locution was needed that could accommodate the need for nuclear parity between the superpowers. "Parity" sounded like a farm problem; "sufficiency" sounded weak. The solution was a line that seemed to satisfy the public's desire to be number one, but that actually only promised a tie: "America must be second to none!" (The idea came from the United States Army's Second Infantry Division Motto, "Second to None.")

Similarly, advertisers whose product is neither better nor worse than their competitors' can truthfully exult: "Unsurpassed in fighting tooth decay!" "Unsurpassed," on sober second thought, is like "second to none" — as good as, but not better than.

How can "standing idly by" be given this creative lift? The history books offer some ideas:

When Woodrow Wilson did not want to be drawn into a war with Mexico in 1913, he told Congress: "We shall not, I believe, be obliged to alter our policy of watchful waiting." That was a catchy phrase, giving a delay a purposeful quality.

Other political figures have tried "Let the dust settle," but that retains a vague "who-lost-China" connotation. The best man in the oxymoronic field of doing nothing with great energy and industriousness was Sir James Mackintosh (1765-1832), who espoused the theory of "disciplined inaction," and reached the acme of heated freezing with the classic phrase "masterly inactivity" today like the slogan "Don't just do something — stand there!"

Baseball manager Casey Stengel is immortalized in the Linguistic Hall of Fame because he delivered the kind of earnestly confused doubletalk that spawned the word "stengelese." In stengelese, a familiar phrase is taken and given a twist that turns a truism into a puzzling falsism.

Casey once admiringly said of a lucky player, "He could fall in a hole and come up with a silver spoon."

When the House of Representatives recently went on live television for the first time, cameras caught the vigorous, cigar-smoking Millicent Fenwick (Rep., N.J.) decrying a proposal to set up a committee to study other committees: "This is a half loaf," she declared, "because we're too greedy to take the other half."

STENGEL . . . doubletalk fame

Today is the last day you can get away with "To Whom It May Concern." In a recent piece grumbling about "whom," I asked readers (who may have been concerned) to suggest alternatives to that stilted salutation, and present herewith a bunch.

"Dear Reader" was a heavy favorite among those who liked the "Dear" form, followed by "Dear Recipient" (sounds too much like "occupant" for my taste) and a grumpily asexual "Dear Person" ("Gentleperson" and "Gentle Reader" were also suggested by a pair of tough-minded correspondents.)

The "To:" crowd — people who use meno pads on all occasions — went for "To Those Concerned" (a good straight translation of T.W.I.M.C.) and "To the Prospective Employer of —." The most effective salutation is the most personal: When writing Julius Caesar, nothing beats "Hail Caesar!" The second best, when addressing a crowd, is to evoke the association of occupation; Napoleon always greeted his men with "Soldiers!" But when taking pen to paper, and addressing some Uriah Heep in an admissions office, or a committee, or perhaps a computer, the need for a personal or an inspiring salutation withers.

A significant portion of the suggestions were for no salutation at all. "I'm sure a guy named Safire," began one letter, "would avoid the whole stilted structure and say, 'A guy named Zilch has asked me to put in a good word for him.' If you use this comment, just say that Zilch himself wrote to you."

That's a good way to avoid the awkwardness or formality or strained informality of a "To Whom" or a "Hi There!" or a "You Don't Know Me, But" on a letter pushing the attributes of one person you hardly know to another person you do not know at all. Begin simply with "This is to commend Josephime Zilch . . ." Or "Here's what I have to say about Josephine, who is looking for a job."

You say you need a heading? Here are a few:

— For your attention (military feeling).

— For your consideration.

— For you to heed (godfather version).

— Dear Admissions Officer (rifleshot approach).

— Si cuius intersit ("If it should be of concern to anyone').

— Dear Sir or Madam, as the case may be (from the Henry Morgan radio show of the 1940s).

—Greetings (Gen. Lewis B. Hershey draft call version).

Throughout the mail, the insistent note recurs: The best salutation to a disembodied entity is nothing at all. "Since the days we recognized that there were women as well as men at the end of 'Dear Sir' letters," writes psychology professor Mitchell Berkun of Quinnipiac (Conn.) College, "we have found that no salutation at all works perfectly well. . . . Plunging right in with the text has got as good a response as anything I have ever written and saves a lot of typing besides." He concludes, "With the customary, stilted sincerity."

Now that we've solved how to salute the unknown — how best to close? "Yours truly" means nothing, "Sincerely" is overworked, 'As ever" cautious, "Cordially" just a shade too hearty, "Affectionately" patronizing, "Love" actionable, and "See ya" forlorn. There hasn't been a really good sign-off written since "Your lordship's most humble, obedient servant," written by Samuel Johnson to Lord Chesterfield, a man he despised. Reader suggestions will be culled and reported upon on some occasion when I'm leaving.

Double negatives do not a positive make. To be "not unhappy" is not the same as to be happy; in that case, the "not un-" construction is a useful, if lazy, device to describe a feeling along the happy-unhappy scale.

On the other hand, I am not unmindful (actually, I'm mindful) of the confusion caused by the convoluted "not un-" construction. Most often, "not un-" is effete affectation used by people who know what they are not but are uncertain about what they are.

harold hosford

It was an Osprey, that much I could see right off. But, if you'd asked me how I knew it was an Osprey I might have fumbled about some before coming up with such things as shape, manner of flight, or maybe the fact that I'd seen its white "forehead" glistening in the morning sun.

The trouble is, all those field marks of an Osprey would have been nothing more than a front. I didn't remember any field marks when I recognized the bird; I just knew it was an Osprey.

If that last statement has an excessive ring of authority to it, let me enlist the support of five "expert" bystanders to make my point.

My "experts" were five Glaucous-winged Gulls that were loafing on a gravel bar almost directly under the Osprey. I almost overlooked them but, following the direction of the Osprey's stare — straight down — they came into view. For a moment I thought they were the object of his attention, but it was only a brief mistake. That Osprey had his eyes on something in the water; my angle with the bird made it look as if his eyes were on the gulls.

But, more importantly, the gulls knew the Osprey's eyes weren't on them. They continued to sit, relaxed and unconcerned about the big raptor that hung so buoyantly above them. They knew he was no threat. They "recognized" him for what he was — a big avian predator, but one whose interest was fish, not birds.

If you were able to engage those gulls in a little interview about how they "recognized" the Osprey, they'd probably have had as much trouble coming up with an answer as I did. But they'd have been just as certain about their identification as I was about mine. After all, they might have said, "to us, knowing predators is a matter of life and death; an Osprey means life for us; an eagle — often death."

What all this is leading up to is that birds are as good as any human birdwatcher at "recognizing" other birds and, in the case of predators, birds react according to what their identification systen tells them. For example, gulls, as my little group did, will sit out the passage of an Osprey with notable indifference. But let that great dark shadow in the sky take the form of a Bald Eagle and pandemonium will break out. As far as gulls are concerned, when there's a Bald Eagle around, the only safe place to be is airborne — and screaming your head off.

But how do gulls tell the difference between an Osprey and a Bald Eagle? Well, there's really only two ways they could. Either the knowledge is an innate part of their programming for life, or they learn the difference. There is good evidence that telling Ospreys from Bald Eagles, for gulls at least, is a matter of learning.

Early in their lives, as tiny chicks in a gull colony, the young gulls learn from their parents — not so much as pupils and teachers but as interested observers. They learn what to eat by what their parents eat and to recognize their parents' voices among the hundreds of other gull voices around them. But, most importantly, they learn to recognize danger, and the sources of that danger, by the way their parents act when danger threatens.

And anyone who has ever spent enough time in a gull colony to see how the gulls react to avian predators can tell you that the gulls know an Osprey when they see one — and react accordingly. They also know a Bald Eagle when they see one — and react quite differently.

Meanwhile, as the days of growth go by, the young gulls are learning the difference too.

So, on the basis of the reactions of my five "experts" I think it safe to say what I saw really was an Osprey.

Ex-ministers attend last Socred cabinet hurrah

Two members of Premier Bill Bennett's cabinet who were defeated in the May 10 provincial election attended their last cabinet meeting Friday.

Cyril Shelford, twice the province's agriculture minister during a 24-year stint in the legislature, and Elwood Veitch, the tourism and small business minister, completed duties in their portfolios.

Shelford was beaten in Skeena by New Democrat and former MP Frank Howard while Veitch lost to former municipal affairs minister James Lorimer, also a New Democrat.

A third defeated minister, Sam Bawlf from Victoria, who was in charge of cutting government red tape, resigned last week.

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt will take over responsibility for the agriculture portfolio and Economic Development Minister Don Phillips will add Veitch's portfolios to his responsibilities.

Bennett said the changes are temporary and new ministers will be appointed after the sitting of the legislature.

The premier, interviewed at the cabinet meeting, said he hoped for a short legislative session beginning next Wednesday that will allow passage of the government's major bills.

"I don't think any member wants to sit through the summer," he said. "It's a new parliament and a chance for new beginnings."

Shelford, who was agriculture minister for a few years under W.A.C. Bennett, said he would probably take a couple of months off before deciding what to do next. He said he has been offered a job in Alberta running a feed lot.

But he said politics is out for him in the future.

"Things have changed an awful lot in the last number of years and it just doesn't excite me any more."

Shelford retires with a pension of $800 a month.

Noon-hour, four-part series set on the value of volunteer work

Women thinking of going back to work or seeking a more challenging career can take advantage of an upcoming four-part, noon-hour series in Victoria on the value of volunteer work.

Called Building a Career Through Volunteer Employment, the course is sponsored by Prime Time, the Volunteer Bureau, the YM-YWCA and the Canada Employment Centre.

The first part, devoted to showing the opportunities for developing job skills in the voluntary field, begins at noon next Friday at the YM-YWCA building, 880 Courtney.

There will be other courses on the following three Fridays.

A brochure outlining the program says it will feature guest speakers who represent employers, employment counsellors and women who have found themselves new careers as a result of volunteeer experience.

Norrie Preston, program director for Prime Time, an organization devoted to helping women in their middle years, says women wanting to get into the job market often find it difficult because they lack relevant work experience.

"At a time when jobs are scarce, it becomes important to explore alternatives and to be innovative in the job search and in sampling different career paths.

"Volunteering can be a bridge of experience between their homebound lives and the working world."

Preston says doing volunteer work enables many women to decide on a career choice on a part-time basis and with a great deal of flexibility.

"Volunteers can have the opportunity to plan, organize, delegate, learn to work in a team, solve problems, meet deadlines, administer a budget and hire staff.

"In short, they can have the opportunity to exercise the same skills and abilities that are necessary for paid employment."

WANTED TO PURCHASE

not less than 200 acres of good Farm & Woodland with or without buildings for the purpose of establishing a comfortable and self-supporting

RESIDENTIAL FARM

(some meat and milk production, land for cultivation of grass, wheat, oats, barley, rape, potatoes, sugar beets, vegetables, fruits, forestry). Opportunity should exist for establishment of a goose and duck farm, for pisiculture (trout, etc.), and for gentleman's guest ranch activities.

The land should be situated either on the shores of a lake or on a quiet secluded beach, or should contain its own lake, or should consist of an entire own lake or sea island or should be a combination of some of these components.

Regions preferred: Beach land or lake areas on Vancouver Island or on the mainland in upper/central or southern British Columbia (even directly neighboring the U.S. border.)

Well wooded land appreciated. Vicinity of a good road preferred. Eventual neighborhood should be agreeable. Remote place considered if it does not result in low price. Long term leasehold opportunities would be studied.

The advertiser welcomes information on taxes and on terms of definite settlement in your region.

Gov't employee in mask sprays carbaryl, Greenpeace employee sprays soap

They're all spraying now

VANCOUVER (CP) — A controversial pesticide spray program to combat an infestation of gypsy moths in the city's Kitsilano neighborhood resumed Friday and environmentalists protested with a spray program of their own.

Federal agricultural workers sprayed the chemical carbaryl on city-owned tracts of land and in privately-owned areas where residents approved the spray.

Meanwhile, the Greenpeace Foundation, which has been involved in a three-month battle with the government to have the carbaryl program cancelled, sprayed an organic insecticide soap where residents oppose carbaryl.

The soap is considered safer than carbaryl but less effective against the moth which is capable of destroying massive amounts of foliage if left unchecked.

An Agriculture Canada spokesman said the spraying was proceeding as planned and no major problems were encountered.

Greenpeace president Dr. Patrick Moore said his group will make no further attempts to block the carbaryl program.

"It is not a matter of allowing it to go ahead," he said in an interview. "We're not going to physically block it or promote the physical blocking of it.

"We've been educating the people in the community for three months now and telling them we don't think carbaryl is safe so if they choose not to believe us at this point after they've had an opportunity to come and look at all the evidence we have, well that's too bad for them.

"As far as we're concerned they can have a bath in the stuff."

Indians claim killing deer not poaching, but religion

Judge Blake Allan reserved judgment Friday in a Victoria provincial court case in which lawyers from the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs argued that freedom of religion is the main issue.

Allan heard the case of two members of the Tsartlip band of Brentwood Bay, 54-year-old Anderson Jack and 51-year-old George Charlie, who were charged under the B.C. Wildlife Act with hunting and possession of a deer out of season following a May 26, 1978, incident on Pender Island.

The bulk of the defence summation following the two-day trial was done by Michael Jackson, a professor of law from the University of B.C.

In his 26-page submission, Jackson said courts have been quite explicit in holding that the freedom of religion protected under Canadian law is not limited to Christianity.

The case involves the Coast Salish religion which requires the spiritual "burning" of sea urchins, salmon and deer meat as a means of communication with deceased ancestors and as a means of stabilizing families who were not resting properly.

Jackson reminded the judge that witnesses described how certain persons were chosen as religious leaders and how they were initiated through a spirit quest. He said the religious leaders played important roles in the life of Coast Salish people, providing guidance and spiritual counselling.

"Chief Tom Sampson of the Tsartlip band described how the practice of burning food for the dead formed an essential and central element of the Coast Salish religion and that only certain religious leaders were capable of officiating at such a ceremony.

"In the defendants' submission, the provincial Wildlife Act cannot be applied in the circumstances of this case to infringe on the exercise of the defendants' freedom of religion. It is submitted that religion is a matter within federal jurisdiction and the provinces cannot pass legislation in relation thereto," Jackson contended.

He also said the act ought to be limited to the particular subject matter with which it deals, namely the conservation of game, and that the intention of the legislature was not to regulate religious practices.

Jackson added that the defendants do not question that freedom of religion can be subject to state regulation but contended that such regulation must respond to a proper balance with the fundamental nature of freedom of religion. Only weighty interests, such as sedition and defamation, would suffice to circumscribe religious activity, Jackson said.

"It is submitted that the effect of this legislation in the particular circumstances of this case is to impair that distinctive Indian identity," Jackson said, referring to Indian celebrations of the spirit world in art, literature, songs, and rituals.

Jack and Charlie were represented by lawyers Louise Mandell and Leslie Pinder of the UBCIC.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang, in summing up, said the purpose of the Wildlife Act was not to ban religious burning of meat or any religious ceremony. He said the act doesn't prohibit hunting in total, but permitted it at designated times, providing a permit is obtained.

He argued that not all the resources were denied the defendants. He said deer meat can be stored for a long time.

Lang said the act cannot be seen as one which absolutely forbids the enactment of the particular burning ceremony but did concede it made that religious rite more difficult.

Turning to the issue of religious freedoms, Lang said Canadian law did not allow such things as human sacrifices or Mormons to have more than one wife because of religious beliefs.

In the case of provincial legislation, Lang offered as an example the B.C. law forcing motorcyclists to wear helmets. He said no exception was made for those who wish to wear turbans and claim that the wearing of a helmet infringed on their religious beliefs.

He said the law was not designed expressly or implicity to stop religious practice.

Lang said it was a fascinating, interesting case in which sincere, devoted witnesses gave testimony. But he urged Allan, "in spite of strong sympathy one may bear," to affirm the statute and convict the defendants.

Allan reserved judgment until June 28.

Bus plunge kills 18

SEOUL (AP) — A bus collided with a truck today and then plunged down a 60-metre embankment, killing 18 persons and injuring 22 others, South Korean police reported.

Authorities said they had no immediate indication what caused the crash near the South Korean town of Toge, 185 kilometres east of Seoul.

Bursaries from CZ

Awards of $750 and $500 will be offered by Crown Zellerbach to students graduating from high school this year.

The awards program, now in its third year, is designed to help students during their first year of post-secondary education.

Students entering university are eligible for the $750 award and those enrolled at a community college or technical institute can apply for the $500 awards.

Sons and daughters of employees will receive 12 of the 20 awards given out this year and eight will be for students graduating from high schools in communities were the company is a major employer.

A+ in every course

A 22-year-old graduating arts and sciences student is the winner of University of Victoria's most prestigious award in that faculty.

John Alan Fawcett, whose parents live at 57 Wellington, will be presented with the governor-general's medal by Lieutenant-Governor Henry P. Bell-Irving at convocation ceremonies today in the McKinnon Centre on campus.

Fawcett received the highest marks of more than 650 graduating arts and science students this year to earn the award.

He completed a double major honors program in physics and applied mathematics, achieving a grade point average of nine, or an A+ in every course.

This summer he is completing his final work term at the Dominion Radio Astrophysical Observatory in Penticton and in the fall will enter a doctoral program in applied mathematics at the California Institute of Technology.

A former Duncan and Comox dairy herdsman will be presented with the Victoria Jubilee Medal for the highest marks among students receiving bachelor of arts degrees.

Glen Scobie, 28, achieved an 8.6 grade point average in the final year of a four-year honors sociology program.

Scobie will not attend convocation because he is presenting a paper at the annual meeting of the Canadian Sociology and Anthropology Association in Saskatoon.

In the fall he will attend the University of Toronto where he has received a Connaught Scholarship worth $5,500 to study for an MA degree in sociology.

Pot bail hearings set

All but one of the 23 men charged in the huge marijuana seizure May 22 north of Tofino appeared in Victoria provincial court Friday and were remanded until next Friday for bail hearings.

The only exception was 38-year-old William Terry Hines of San Rafael, Calif. Defence lawyer Chris Considine requested Hines be remanded until next Tuesday for a bail hearing and Judge Fred Green granted the request.

The full names and hometowns of the 23 men were released Friday.

The names, which for the the non-Americans includes surnames which are hyphenated with the father's surname first and the mother's surname second, ages and hometowns are:

William Francis Perka, 34, of Port Townsend, Wash.

Paul Oscar Nelson, 26, of Seattle, and Marina del Rey, Calif.

William Terry Hines, 38, of San Rafael, Calif.

Michael Walter Butler, 27, of Westport, Wash.

Stephen Earl Johnson, 33, of Port Townsend, Wash.

Abraham Angulo-Guerro, 36, of Buena Ventura, Colombia.

Edgar Barragan-Escobar, 19, of Bogota, Colombia.

Hugo Alberto Ortiz-Mosquera, 33, of Cali, Colombia.

Uriel de Jesus Taborda-Gomez, 26, of Bogota, Colombia.

Hernando Hernandez-Alvarez, 37, of Cali, Colomiba.

Ariel de Jesus Moncada-Guevara, 25, of Juatica, Colombia.

Severo Guerrero, 45, of Buena Ventura, Colombia.

Jaime Gutierrez-Torres, 29, of Buena Ventura, Colombia.

Jaime de Jesus Marin-Jaramillo, 37, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Pedro Nel Beles-Toscanos, 31, of Buena Ventura, Colomiba.

Holmes Gomez-Rodriguez, 37, of Cali, Colombia.

George Woodrow Christopher, 30, of San Andres Island, Colombia.

Rodolfo Hodson-Taylor, 43, of Puerto Limon, Costa Rica.

Johny Calzada, 23, of Buena Ventura, Colombia.

Marco Antonio Lopera-Penagos, 59, of Mellin, Colombia.

Albergipson Frasser-Afanador, 38, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Ebert Forbes-MacNish, 60, of Santa Cruz, Colombia.

Segiundo Quinomes-Landasuri, 33, of Buena Ventura, Colombia.

All are now jointly charged with importing an estimated 35 tons of marijuana into Canada, possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking, and conspiracy to import marijuana into Canada.

$1,750 assault award

Richard Harvey Moore, 49, of Victoria, has been awarded $1,750 damages for an assault nearly five years ago at Cobble Hill.

The B.C. Supreme Court ruling by Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane was received this week following a hearing last month in which Moore sued John P. Slater and RCMP Constable James Eglinski for assault, false arrest and false imprisonment Aug. 16, 1974.

Macfarlane said the constable was entitled to act as he did and is not liable for the assault, false arrest or false imprisonment.

The incident involving the two defendants resulted after Slater entered into an agreement to purchase a Fisher Road house owned by the plaintiff's father, who had given Moore permission to occupy it pending possession by a new owner.

Moore's father had not informed Slater that Moore could stay in the house meanwhile, and when Slater appeared on the morning of Aug. 16 with Eglinski, of the Shawnigan Lake police detachment, he ordered Moore out of the house.

Voices were raised, profanities exchanged and a struggle took place, in which Moore was slightly hurt and suffered indignities.

Part of the evidence given described how Moore was seized by the neck, choked to unconsciousness and while he was being held Slater grabbed Moore's testicles and twisted.

Macfarlane noted that pain Moore felt at the outset was excruciating, but resulted in no lasting injury.

"The evidence clearly states that Slater's conduct was high-handed and malicious and that his attack upon Moore was vicious and cowardly.

"His conduct showed gross contempt for the plaintiff's rights and calls for an expression of the court's strong aversion for his callous disregard for those rights," Macfarlane said in his written judgment.

He said Eglinski's role had been carried out in an effort to keep the peace.

Slater had already been punished in a sense, having been convicted of criminal assault causing bodily harm, against which his appeal had been rejected, the judge observed. Slater was given an absolute discharge for that offence.

In the circumstances, Macfarlane ordered Slater to pay the costs of both Moore and Eglinski.

Moore was represented by Douglas Christie, Slater by T.M. Singh, and Eglinski by John Haig.

Before the judge

Judge Fred Green told a 17-year-old in provincial court Friday her age was the only thing preventing her from going to jail.

Karleen Pamela Bloudoff, 6007 Sooke Road, pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and was given a $150 fine, 75 hours of community service work, 10 months probation, and a driving ban covering that period.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said the incident began at 12:17 a.m. Oct. 12 when she was stopped in a 1978 Trans Am at Douglas and Queens by city police using radar to clock her at 125 km/h in a 50 zone. She told officers she was late picking up her boyfriend in Sooke.

At 12:37 a.m. she was again stopped, this time by Colwood RCMP in front of Millstream Chevrolet Ltd. on the Old Island Highway. Smith said she was clocked at 98 km/h in a 50 zone.

While the RCMP officer was in his vehicle writing out a ticket, Bloudoff took off at high speed.

A chase along Sooke Road, during which she passed several vehicles, reached 140 km/h with the police vehicle losing ground. The officer then broke off the chase due to the risk, and because he already had the driver's name and address.

But further along Sooke Road, he saw Bloudoff's car smashed against a power pole. Bloudoff and her passenger were injured slightly and taken to Victoria General Hospital for a checkup.

An RCMP specialist in traffic fatalities said the minimum speed the Tran Ams could have been doing just before the mishap was about 140 km/h.

Smith told the court Bloudoff had eight traffic violations between January of last year and the day of the accident and had been under suspension for a time.

Defence lawyer Chris Considine said Bloudoff lived with her boyfriend then and that he became angry and sometimes violent when she was late to pick him up.

Green described the young woman's driving as "absolutely reckless" and said she had no regard whatsoever for the public or her passenger.

Smith also said the $8,000 Trans Am is a writeoff and that the Insurance Corporation of B.C. is instituting legal action in the case.

Boat burns, crew safe

PORT HARDY (CP) — Four persons were rescued Friday from the Seattle-based fishing boat Thor when it was destroyed by fire 16 kilometres off Cape Scott on the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

A spokesman for the rescue co-ordination centre in Victoria said none of the four removed from the 14-metre burning vessel were injured.

The persons aboard the Thor, skippered by Robert Barclay, took to a dinghy about 10:30 a.m. and were later picked up by the fishing vessel Island Gold from Port Hardy.

The fishermen were transferred to the Canadian Coast Guard vessel Ready and brought here by helicopter.

Fraser log trap working well

A log trap on the Fraser River designed to catch floating material before it reaches the Strait of Georgia already has collected about 15 acres of debris, the provincial forests ministry said Friday.

Engineer Don Cameron said the trap, which catches the potential navigational hazards before they reach the sea, will continue to be used until the river level drops in July.

The trap, financed by the federal and provincial governments, was installed in March. It consists of two fin booms.

Press talks breakthrough?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lengthy shutdown of Vancouver's two daily newspapers, which earlier this week appeared as if it might drag on all summer, moved a step closer Friday to an end.

A significant move was made when the publishers of the evening Sun and morning Province and the printing pressmen's union agreed to submit the major issue of manning the presses to compulsory arbitration.

Most other issues in the strike-lockout, which began Nov. 1 when two unions went on strike and four others were locked out, have been settled or are close to settlement.

The strike-lockout affects about 1,400 employees at Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the two newspapers.

The two parties said in a joint statement they have agreed to establish a three-member inquiry panel to examine the manning issue and to make recommendations that will be implemented.

Manning involves the number of pressmen required to work on a given shift. The company has said the union is trying to protect jobs that contributed nothing to production.

The panel will include one member nominated by the union and one by the company. The chairman will be chosen by Donald Munroe, head of the provincial labor relations board.

Earlier this week, Pacific Press rejected a pressmen's union proposal for binding arbitration because too many conditions were attached to the offer.

Publishers Clark Davey of the Sun and Paddy Sherman of the Province said the pressmen wanted to limit the fact-finding inquiry and mediation-arbitration process only to the manning clause which could mean changes might be restricted or contradicted by other sections in the contract.

Pacific Press had suggested binding arbitration early in the dispute to settle the manning issue.

Controversy over the issue led the pressmen to withdraw from the joint council of newspaper unions April 23.

The pressmen left the joint council when mediator John Kagel, a California lawyer, said in a confidential report that the pressmen were too rigid in their bargaining stance on the manning clause.

Kagel said before leaving the talks that the company and the joint council had agreed on the length of the contract and the final wage rate of $512.50 a week for key classifications in the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild, the largest union in the joint council, by May, 1981.

He said agreement could not be reached on how pay increases were to be distributed during the proposed agreement.

It was expected talks on those issues would resume this weekend. However, union spokesman were unavailable for comment.

300-room convention site for Whistler

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 300-room hotel with full recreation and convention facilities will be built at the ski resort community of Whistler, Mayor Pat Carleton and developer Peter Gregory announced Friday.

Construction of the hotel, called the Mountain Inn, is scheduled to begin April 1, 1980, with completion of the first phase set for Dec. 1, 1980.

The first phase calls for construction of 150 rooms, service, food, beverage and convention areas. The second phase, to be completed by December, 1982, will include a further 150 rooms and recreation facilities.

Boy with hose fights fatal fire

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two members of a Langley family are dead despite an effort to save them from a blazing garage by a 10-year-old boy with a garden hose.

Marvin Nystrom, 38, died in hospital Friday of third-degree burns. His six-year-old daughter Treena perished in the fire Wednesday.

A spokesman for Langley RCMP said Nystrom was working in the garage while Treena was watching television in a family room in the loft of the structure when the fire broke out.

Trevor Nystrom entered the building, battling back the flames with a garden hose, and assisted his severely-burned father to safety.

Trevor was treated at hospital in the Fraser Valley suburb of Vancouver for second-degree burns to his hands and released.

Neighborly gesture leads to deathbed

MISSION (CP) — Robert Matus, 45, of Mission died in hospital Thursday from injuries suffered while helping a neighbor with some construction work at his home.

Police said Matus was injured when a cement block slid into a hole he was working in and pinned him against the side of the hole.

Forest council warns longshoremen

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike by British Columbia longshoremen would be a serious setback to Canada's effort to regain a reputation in the world market as a reliable supplier of export commodities, the president of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C. said Friday.

"The labor-management turmoil of the early 1970s resulted in a loss of that reputation and it is only in the past two or three years that we have begun the difficult job of re-establishing it," Don Lanskail said in a news release.

Longshoremen voted earlier in the week to set a strike deadline of next Thursday after rejecting a conciliator's report that they vote again on a proposed contract turned down twice before — the last time by one vote.

A strike by the 3,000 longshoremen would shut down ports at Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria, Chemainus, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Prince Rupert.

Union officials said Friday the next move in the dispute is up to management. In return, a spokesman for the B.C. Maritime Employers Association said there will be no increase in its offer.

Vancouver baby dumped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social workers were trying Friday to learn the identity of an infant boy found abandoned in a city yard.

The baby, nicknamed Mikey, was found Thursday against a fence between two houses. He was wrapped in a light blanket.

Human resources staff had not been able to find out who the child is and now are appealing for the parents or anyone else who might know something to come forward.

Social worker Carlton Franco said the purpose of the appeal is not to punish the parents, but to get a history of the child.

He said the infant has been placed in a foster home, but ministry officials want to make a more permanent arrangement.

Meanwhile, a social worker was questioning a young mother Friday after her two small chidren were left inside a locked car in the downtown area while she was shopping.

Abandoned tot found in yard is held by foster mother

10 apply to stage '81 games

Ten communities are vying for the right to host the 1981 B.C. summer and winter games, Ron Butlin, games co-ordinator, said Friday.

Bids for the winter games have been received from Fort St. John, Prince George, Dawson Creek, Nelson and Trail.

Bids for the summer games have come from Chilliwack, Delta, Campbell River, Nanaimo and Comox-Courtenay.

The two host communities will be chosen by the end of the month.

Charlottes doctors now won't resign

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five doctors who had threatened to withdraw their services from the Queen Charlotte Islands reversed their decision Friday following a meeting with the British Columbia Medical Association.

The doctors had submitted their resignations, which would have been effective July 1, after the provincial government refused to pay them overtime.

But Dr. George Deagle, speaking for the five, said they have agreed to accept a government commitment to pay them for overtime worked — at least until new salary negotiations are completed this summer.

Uranium outfit denies keeping probe in dark

KELOWNA (CP) — Norcen Energy Resources Ltd., the company doing uranium exploration work at Beaverdell is bending over backwards to ensure that a provincial inquiry into uranium mining is getting appropriate information, a company spokesman says.

Wilfred Loucks, general manager of mine development for the firm, said all documents that can be released on work at the company's property 50 kilometres southeast of here will be made available at formal hearings by the commission in November.

Earlier this week, John Moelaert, chairman of the local branch of the Canadian Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, said the provincial and federal governments are deliberately withholding information on uranium exploration and its possible effects from the public.

Loucks said his company is not trying to hide anything. Among the documents to be given the commission, which was set up to investigate the impact of uranium mining, will be a preliminary engineering report made public this week by Moelaert, he said.

The company official said Norcen had maintained a relatively open information policy but it was not logical to release certain technical data before it was complete.

"Compared to a fireplace, what's so hot about a Fisher Stove?"
Efficiency, for one thing. Conventional fireplaces waste up to 90% of wood heat up the chimney. But a Fisher Fireplace Insert radiates heat so well, it can cut heating bills by 50% - or more. Yet, with its doors open, it lends the same coziness to a home as a fireplace.

Car falls 90 metres but trio unscathed

Two Cassidy men and a Ladysmith hitchiker, who got more of a ride than he expected, escaped with minor injuries Friday when their car catapulted over a guard rail and crashed down a 90-metre Malahat bank.

The three walked away from the demolished car after it swerved to miss a deer, hit the guard rail and shot off the road about a mile north of Goldstream Park about 1:30 a.m.

The car clipped the tops off some small trees then cut a swath through the bush as it plumeted down the cliff before coming to rest against a thick tree trunk.

"We just hit the guard rail and catapulted straight up in the air . . . we took off like a bullet," said Kelly Beggs, 19, a passenger in the vehicle.

Beggs, who was in the back seat when the car left the road, says he doesn't remember anything of his brief flight.

"I can remember the deer and hitting the guard rail but after that I guess I blacked out," he said as he stood and watched the car being recovered Friday.

With Beggs was Calvin Bruce Scheske, 18, the driver, and the unidentified hitchhiker.

Beggs said he tumbled from the car when it came to rest and fell another five metres down the bank before regaining his feet and scrambling back to the highway. The other two followed him up.

Beggs said four cars went by before he finally ran to the middle of the road to block a vehicle.

"I was right by the yellow line waving my arms; there's no way they could have missed me," he said. "A semi (truck) slowed down, just kept driving, then took off."

At the highway there was little to indicate an accident had taken place, except a black skid mark showing where the car had swerved to miss the bolting deer. The cement guard rail was chipped and a path of broken trees and brush led to the wreck of the '68 Dodge Dart.

The car wasn't visible from the highway, but Beggs said it was a total wreck, its engine thrown clear, its tires flat and its body badly damaged.

Police and ambulance workers were called back to the scene at about 11 a.m. when Scheske's father, Reginald, slipped and hurt his back while climbing down to the wreck.

Ferries post explosive warnings

The B.C. Ferry Corp. is posting signs at all terminals informing the public about regulations governing the transport of explosive or highly flammable materials on passenger ferries.

The action came as ferry officials and the Canadian Coast Guard continued investigating a May 26 incident in which a freight truck apparently carried a load of propane aboard the Queen of Esquimalt.

"Our passengers really don't realize how dangerous it is even to carry an extra can of gas aboard a vessel like that, where everyone's coming down on to the car deck smoking," said ferry spokesmen Betty Nicholson.

The corporation also plans to send letters to all freight carriers who use the system warning them the dangerous cargo regulations must be strictly followed.

She said that while those precautionary steps are being taken the incident is being thoroughly investigated.

She said preliminary findings show a Sidney Freight Ltd. truck carrying compressed gas boarded the Queen of Esquimalt's 6 p.m. sailing from Tsawwassen.

Nicholson said a leak was detected on the car deck about five miles out and the ferry continued to Swartz Bay while crew members searched for the source.

Early reports from the ferry corporation said the dangerous cargo was detected and the truck ordered off the ferry before the ship sailed.

But Nicholson said the first report was incorrect and was apparently based on statements from a ferry official at Swartz Bay who wasn't fully aware of the circumstances.

Conflicting versions of the incident surfaced when a woman who was a passenger told the Times she was parked near the truck on the trip from Tsawwassen. The truck, she said, was leaking gas the whole time.

"Our original information was incomplete . . . that's how the conflicting stories occurred," said Nicholson.

Hydro cuts own power figures

B.C. Hydro in two years has reduced energy consumption by an average of 17 per cent at its Vancouver Island offices and warehouses.

Gordon Roper, hydro division manager, said the savings accomplished at the offices were brought about solely by more efficent use of existing energy sources.

"A slight lowering of thermostats, reducing unnecessary lighting, adjustment of night setbacks for lighting and heating and lower hot water temperatures were largely responsible for the reductions," he said.

'Little effect' logging inlet

Forests Minister Tom Waterland said on his return from Princess Louisa Inlet Friday the impact on the proposed logging in the area has been "blown all out of proportion."

MacMillan-Bloedel officials took Waterland and Lands and Parks Minister Jim Chabot on a tour of the picturesque fiord northeast of Powell River.

Waterland said the first-hand look convinced him the small amount that will be logged will have little visual effect.

Mac-Blo intends to log 600 acres over the next four years of its 9,000 acre property in the area. Of the 600 acres, only about 30 are visible from the inlet that is a popular recreation area for boaters.

The small tract to be logged is at an oblique angle from the water, and would be further camouflaged by rock outcroppings and other natural breaks in the topography, he said.

The fuss raised by conservationists claiming logging would ruin the 10-mile fiord have been greatly exaggerated, the minister said.

Some 1,000 boaters annually pass up the fiord on their way to Chatterbox Falls provincial park at the head of the inlet.

Fire hazard climbing

The forest fire danger is moderate to high in several areas of B.C., the forests ministry said Friday.

The Prince George region has been the hardest hit, with more than 4,800 hectares of forest destroyed.

A total of 73 new fires occurred during the week, bringing the year's total to 368, compared with 232 to date last year.

Outfall opposed

An application by a trailer park owner for a sewage outfall near Otter Point has raised a furore among sports fishermen and homeowners.

Resident Don Murray said Friday a petition is being gathered opposing the application made by Wells O'Weary Trailer Park, 8118 West Coast Road.

The trailer park is seeking permission from the Pollution Control Board to dump up to 62,000 gallons of effluent a day into the ocean through anoutfall about 200 feet offshore near Otter Point. The line is an integral part of a plan to expand the existing mobile home park.

The effluent would be discharged after it had been held in septic tanks for at least 24 hours.

Murray said the effluent would be detrimental to fishing and harmful to the quality of life in the area.

Canoe safety demonstrated

A safety demonstration on canoeing will be held at the Crystal Pool from 10 a.m. to noon Sunday in conjuction with Canoe Safety Week which is being observed throughout B.C.

Instructors from the Victoria Canoe Club will show members and visitors how to handle a canoe in difficult waters and how to avoid accidents.

'Mr. Jones? Do you have a son named John?'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A 3 a.m. knock at the door summons a sleepy-eyed father. Pulling on a rumpled robe, he is greeted by a sober-faced police officer.

"Mr. Jones? Do you have a son named John? I'm sorry to inform you he has been involved in an accident."

The words send a chill down the father's spine. But there's worse to come, as the policeman gropes for other words that might help to soften the impact of his stark message.

He knows there are none.

Says Victoria police constable Derek Chow: "No matter what words you use, however gently you try to break the news, you know eventually you have to tell that parent his child has been killed. It's one of the worst jobs we have to do."

Chow is one of scores of police officers across B.C. now trying to blue-pencil such tragic scenarios, in a program aimed specifically at the graduation party and beach party season.

Co-ordinated by the attorney-general's department as part of the comprehensive drinking-driving CounterAttack program, the grad program is now in its second year.

But its message is the same: If you drink, don't drive.

Or, as a CounterAttack leaflet puts it: "The most lethal mixture of all is alcohol and gasoline."

The presentation at Victoria senior secondary school this week by Chow and fellow-policeman John Smith, of the department's community services division, was typical in format: a brief introductory talk including some statistics on drinking-driving fatalities, a film showing the effects of alcohol on driving competence, then another few comments, solicited questions and unsolicited advice.

The two officers swing into a relaxed, amiable routine. They kid each other. Chow, a Vic High graduate himself, notes pityingly that Smith had the misfortune to graduate from Oak Bay. Smith counters by the occasional bit of clowning while Chow is making his pitch to the grads.

Almost immediately the students are laughing with the policemen, an easy rapport is established.

There are also frequent outbursts of laughter during the film, which shows a group of Los Angeles citizens undergoing various driving tests, first stone-cold sober and then well and truly smashed.

The tests are conducted under controlled, off-highway conditions. Normal and impaired driving performances are carefully monitored and compared, and the results are predictably appalling.

The Vic High grads laugh loudly at scene after scene of red-faced drivers fighting the wheel, slewing wildly and scattering orange pylon route markers in all directions.

But a reporter's impression is that through all the levity, hoots and good-natured heckling the basic message is getting through to many in the audience.

Without preaching or pomposity, the policemen skilfully weave in some propaganda, facts like:

— More than one-quarter of all highway deaths involve people aged 16 to 20, and alcohol is a factor in half of these.

— Impaired drivers in the 16-17 age bracket are 165 times more likely to be killed than the average driver who is not impaired.

— B.C. has, in Chow's words, "absolutely the worst drinking and driving record in Canada," with more than 300 people killed in alcohol-related traffic accidents last year.

The officers also deflate a few myths, such as the one that black coffee helps a drunk sober up.

Says Chow: "What coffee does is make him go to the washroom more often. It just makes him a more wide awake drunk."

And they offer some basic advice — for instance, on arranging charter buses, taxis or other forms of transportation for grad parties.

For good measure, this year for the first time police forces are also including in such presentations an appeal for grads not to celebrate by acts of vandalism.

Says Smith: "We don't want you telling people you are proud of your school on the sides of buildings."

It's also Smith who delivers the effective punchline as the grads stream out of the hall: "Have a good time, but please don't become one of our statistics."

Manager Whitfield saw sales double

Mrs. Patricia Park in well-stocked frozen food section

Retailing youngster growing fast after wobbling a bit for starters

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

To most outward appearances the 15,000-square-foot building set in a newish shopping centre in Central Saanich looks like your typical modern supermarket.

The shelves along the wide aisles are neatly stacked with the usual run of groceries, fresh meat and produce. There are also a number of items not generally found in a food store, including major household appliances, rubber dinghies and stereos.

But the invisible feature that distinguishes this supermarket from any other in the Greater Victoria area is that it is owned by the people who use it.

The Peninsula Consumer Services Co-op on Keating Cross Road is still in its infancy — two years old last month — but according to general manager Bud Whitfield the retailing youngster is healthy, has grown quickly and has a lot more growth ahead.

In its first year the co-op had a sales volume of $1.4 million. But, while the latest figure awaits formal announcement at the co-op's annual meeting June 13, that performance was almost doubled in the year ending April 30, 1979.

Whitfield acknowledges that the brisk second year was due in large part to the decision by the co-op's membership last year to do away with the former members-only rule and open the store to all shoppers.

The reason for that decision, he explained, was the initially slow influx of members.

When the co-op was established in May, 1977, it was based on a financing formula under which members were required to buy 10 $10 shares and pay a weekly service fee of $2.50. The latter was intended to cover heat, light and other basic operating costs.

But under that approach the co-op failed to attract the required minimum of 1,200 members. In Whitfield's words, "there were not enough people in this area who liked the concept of a direct charge where they were expected to pay a weekly fee, whether they used the services or not."

Hence the decision to open the store to all-comers, and scrap the service fee.

Ironically, that move — in addition to almost doubling the sales volume in a single year — also provided a substantial boost for membership enrolment. The total which had stood at 570 little more than a year ago is today 1,107.

Whitfield said members are drawn from a much wider area than just the Saanich Peninsula, including Sooke, Jordan River, Victoria, Salt Spring and North Pender islands. And there's also the lady who comes over once a month from Vancouver to shop.

"They are people who really believe in the co-op concept," he added.

"We are trying to provide the goods they need for the best possible price we can. If we make money doing so, it is turned back to the membership in accordance with their patronage."

(For example, if a member family spent $1,000 at the store in a year in which the co-op made a two per cent profit, it would receive $20 payable in cash or shares).

Whitfield was reluctant to estimate in dollar terms how much an average family of four might save by doing its grocery shopping at the co-op.

"But our prices have consistently been as good as or better than the competition," he said. The co-op does its own regular price comparison survey (on a shelf-to-shelf basis, excluding specials) and the latest placed it 4.2 per cent below its nearest competitor.

Whitfield pointed out that significant savings can be made on such items as canned goods if shoppers are prepared to buy the co-op's own labels rather than national brands.

And despite the open-door policy, he said, there are still tangible advantages in being a member rather than merely a customer.

Members can purchase home heating oil at a five-cent-a-gallon discount, and benefit from an annual members-only sale in which all store items are available for 10 per cent less than the regular price.

Yet a third incentive is in the works and will be available soon — a gasoline bar offering motorists a two-cent-a-gallon discount.

Whitfield said the experience of the past two years shows there is a definite need for co-op retailing in Greater Victoria. And he foresees an expansion of the concept to include many other goods and services.

Legislators getting set for the rerun

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The B.C. legislature will makes its second attempt this year at getting on with the business of governing the province when the house opens Wednesday.

The spring session which began March 22 turned out to be one of the province's shortest regular sittings at only nine sitting days. It was cut short when on April 3 Premier Bill Bennett called on Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving to dissolve the house for a general election.

Because it is the start of a new government — the first session of the 32nd parliament — the entire opening process has to be repeated.

On Wednesday at 2: p.m. Bell-Irving will arrive at the legislative steps to the accompaniment of military bands and a royal salute fired from the lawn. He will carry out the traditional inspection of the honor guard before being escorted into the chambers.

He will read the throne speech, which is not expected to differ much — at least in content — from the one he read just over two months ago.

Once the ceremonies are over and a Speaker named (most observers feel Harvey Schroeder will be returned) business of the house is expected to proceed rapidly.

Consideration is being given by both sides to cut short debate on the throne speech because that debate already took place in late March.

The same may go for debate on the budget that immediately follows.

The election was called the day after the budget was introduced so there was little debate on the record $4.56 billion proposed government spending. But during the campaign the NDP said they would make few changes to the budget if elected, so protracted debate at this point seems unlikely.

For the first time since party politics were introduced to the province in 1903, only two parties will be represented in the legislature. The governing Social Credit party holds the edge with 31 of 57 seats to 26 for the opposition NDP.

Almost every backbencher and cabinet minister surveyed by the Times is hoping for a short session. Many have made holiday plans for late July in the expectation of the house sitting no longer than July 15.

Memories are still vivid of the long, acrimonious summer of 1977 when the legislature sat in the stuffy chambers until September in the longest session on record.

After the general budget debate, the house will consider the detailed spending of each ministry, with the opposition offering suggestions for what it feels would be better use of public funds and the government defending its spending decisions.

Debate on the ministries' estimates is followed by new legislation.

Premier Bill Bennett has said there are only a few important bills urgently requiring attention.

There are 17 MLAs in the assembly who were not there when the house dissolved April 3 but not all are new to the B.C. house.

Jack Davis (SC — North Vancouver-Seymour) resigned last September following his conviction for fraud. But he climbed back on to the political wagon, first winning party support with the nomination, and then on to an easy victory May 10.

On the NDP side of the house, three winners this time sat in the house before being defeated in the Socred sweep of 1975 — Ernie Hall (Surrey), Jim Lorimer (Burnaby-Willingdon) and Colin Gabelmann (North Island).

Another newcomer, Stu Leggatt (NDP — Coquitlam-Moody) has six years experience as an MP in the House of Commons.

Old-timers Frank Howard (Skeena) and Frank Mitchell (Esquimalt) join the NDP ranks for a repeat performance. Both were MLAs in the 1950s.

Barrett will remain as leader, says Lea

NDP leader Dave Barrett has the support of his backbenchers and will remain party leader unless he wants to step down, Graham Lea (NDP-Prince Rupert) said Friday.

During taping of the television program Capital Comment, Lea said Barrett's record of leading the party to steadily increasing popularity is proof enough of his abilities as leader.

In the May 10 provincial election, the NDP lost for the second straight time to the Socreds but signficantly narrowed the gap while increasing its percentage of the popular vote to an all-time high of 46 per cent.

Asked if he would recommend to caucus that Barrett remain as leader, Lea said no such motion is necessary.

"The only way Dave Barrett will be removed is if he makes a personal decision, and it would have to be a very personal decision, to step down and there is no indication that he is thinking, or should think, that way," the former highways minister said.

On the same program Lea criticized the move by the B.C. Ferry Corp. to place the Queen of Prince Rupert on a run between Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The original plan was to put the mothballed Queen of Surrey on the run from Vancouver Island to Rupert with various stops including Skidegate on the Queen Charlottes. But the Charlottes were dropped because of the $3 million cost of building a suitable dock at Skidegate.

The Ferry Corp. then opted for the Queen of Prince Rupert for that route.

"I wonder how many years it's going to take me to convince the government that the people of the Charlottes are not looking for a passenger ferry. They're looking for a vessel designed to move freight economically and speedily," Lea said.

$17,600 awarded to injured cyclist

A 17-year-old cyclist whose leg is 1½ inches shorter because of a 1976 traffic accident in Esquimalt was awarded $17,600 damages in B.C. Supreme Court Friday.

Donald Gajda, then 14, received a broken femur, lost two teeth and broke two others when thrown off his 10-speed bike at the intersection of Lampson and Devonshire by a car driven by Karen Reidie.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan awarded general damages of $22,000 but found Gajda 20 per cent responsible. Prejudgment interest at 8¾ per cent to Jan. 1, 1979, and 11 per cent since also is payable.

The boy spent 8½ weeks in acute care, further weeks in Gorge rehabilitative hospital and required extensive physiotherapy while getting about on crutches and canes.

Orthopedic surgeon Dr. James Warren said after initial traction and placement of a steel pin in the boy's shin to correct displacement, there was shortening of the bone and loss of knee flexion. A further operation was conducted and in the following year more shortening became evident, Warren said.

While the other leg grew normally, bone growth in the broken leg slowed down, and on May 14 of this year when Warren last saw the plaintiff, the leg was 1¾ inches shorter. Normal hip and knee movement had returned.

To help correct the disparity Warren prescribed lifts for the boy's shoe, but even with the extra height and thicker heel, there remains a half-inch difference and a noticeable limp.

He said the boy no longer participates in contact sports and is self-conscious about his leg.

Within about 10 years the doctor expected there would be degenerative arthritis of the lower spine, already affected by the strain of a tilted pelvis, which causes back pain.

Additional dental work will be required as a result of the jaw injury.

The award covers pain, suffering and loss of amenities.

Lawyer James Carfra, representing Gajda, claimed there was negligence in the operation of the motor vehicle and asked for general and special damages.

T.P. O'Grady, for the defendant, said the boy should have seen the motorist signal and start to make a left turn before his bike entered the intersection from the opposite direction.

Career best helps Elaine spring upset

A startling upset by the five-year old brown mare Holridge Elaine, owned and driven by John Hollingsworth of Richmond, marked the featured Preferred Invitational Handicap on the 10-race program at Sandown Harness Raceway Friday night.

Holridge Elaine came from off the pace in the stretch to edge the highly-regarded Delta Duke and score her first win of the year.

She also set a lifetime best mark of 2:04.4 on a track which appears to be getting quicker each racing day.

Winner of seven last year, Holridge Elaine returned $24.40, $9.70 and $4.00 and combined with Delta Duke for a surprising exactor of $270.70 as the favored Kalamea Brad ran out of the money.

Speaking of speed, Shadows an How, a three-year old bay filly oned and driven by Doug Ferguson of Surrey also established a best time ever with a clocking of 2:05 in the eighth, also a Preferred event.

John Glen was the only driver to score twice. The smart, young reinsman was a clear-cut winner on his own 10-year old bay gelding Tommy Dancer ($7.00) in the sixth and then, replacing the injured Joe Hudon on Bold Design in the seventh, Glen brought that favorite "home for Joe"

Bold Design, in scoring his second win, paid $5.70.

Glen, who is 21, and comes from Regina Beach, Sask., has been an owner for two years and a driver for one.

It was mostly a night for the public picks with form holding in all but the feature. However, there was a pleasant surprise in the seventh when Howler, a 60-1 shot, ran second to Bold Design and returned $52.40 to place and combined with Bold Design for a $194.10 Exactor.

Friday's crowd was 1,062 and the mutuel handle $79,914.

Trainer Jim Mohorich offered some news behind the scenes when he said he plans to enter Billy Barker in next Saturday's feature race. Bill Barker, owned by former Prince George mayor Harold Moffat, is rated as Western Canada's fastest pacer.

Mohorich wants Billy Barker to have "two or three" races at Sandown before taking a short summer holiday.

(Results, Monday's entries on page 19).

Claremont athletes second

BURNABY — Burnaby Central, aiming for its sixth British Columbia high school track and field championship in nine years, grabbed a 12-point lead Friday in the first day of competition in the two-day event at Swangard Stadium.

Burnaby Central picked up 30 points in seven events. Claremont of Victoria was second with 18, two points ahead of Prince of Wales of Vancouver.

Norm Wilding provided Burnaby Central with its only win of the day, taking the hammer throw with a toss of 49.34 metres.

Steve Pybus of Summerland set a B.C. record in the men's 5,000-metre race with a time of 15 minutes, 11.1 seconds, 2.5 seconds faster than the time recorded last year by Steve Gleave of South Delta.

Other winners were Dave Osbaldiston of Kamloops in the men's triple jump, Gwen Ranquist of Vancouver's Charles Tupper in the women's javelin, Jim Mills of Richmond in the shot put, Donna McIntyre of Kelowna in the women's discus and Caroline Wallis of Magee of Vancouver in the women's 3,000-metre race.

Oak Bay wins track crown

Oak Bay snatched a team triumph from the St. Michael's . University-Norfolk House squad Friday as the final relay event decided the title in the annual Greater Victoria junior secondary schools track and field meet at Centennial Stadium.

Oak Bay athletes finished with a total of 219 points, 12 ahead of the their SMU-NH rivals. Arbutuas took third place in the 13-school met with 171½ points, followed by Lansdowne (168½) and Cedar Hill (108).

Standout performances by Dave Whittaker, who won three events and set three of the nine meet records established, paced Oak Bay to the victory.

Trevor McRae of Reynolds was another winner of three events. In a remarkable display of versatility, McRae won the shot put, 100 metres and 800 metres in the midget boys' division.

Also competing in the midget section, Whittaker cracked the long jump record with a leap of 5.93 metres and set new marks in the 200 metres (23.9 seconds) and 400 metres (53.8 seconds).

Doug Waldie of SMU added one more record to the midget boys' list as he travelled 12.12 metres in the triple jump.

Among juvenile boys, Bill Laturnus of SMU set a standard with a time of 13.6 in the 100-metre hurdles and Oak Bay's Andrew Edwards posted a 100-metre record with an effort of 11.4 seconds.

Karen Lightbody of Arbutus, with a clocking of 25.7 seconds in the 200 metres, and Cedar Hill's Pat Wellman, running the 1,500 in 4:35.5, erased former records in the juvenile girls' division. Wellman also took the 800 metres and the high jump.

Debbie Ritz of Lansdowne became the lone record-wrecker among the juvenile girls as she covered the 1,500 metres in 5:15.7.

Sonics truly a super team

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Seattle SuperSonics no longer care if they're not respected.

Culminating a year of dedicated effort, and overcoming the loss of two starting centres, the SuperSonics are the champions of the National Basketball Association.

They wrapped up the first title in their 12-year history Friday night by beating the defending champion Washington Bullets 97-93 as guards Gus Williams (23), Dennis Johnson (21) and Fred Brown (14) combined for 58 points.

"We were the Rodney Dangerfields of the NBA," said forward John Johnson, "but if they don't respect us now, we don't care, because we're the champions."

Seattle lost to the Bullets in last year's finals after leading the best-of-seven series 2-1 and 3-2. After losing the first game this year, the SuperSonics swept the next four.

"We deserved to win," Johnson said. "We felt we should have beaten Washington last year, but inexperience cost us. We were determined from Day One in training camp to get the title and not let it slip away."

Seattle lost centre Marvin Webster when he became a free agent and jumped to New York Knicks last summer. His replacement, Tom LaGarde, suffered a knee injury last Dec. 2 and never returned.

"Even when we won 52 games in the regular season," said John Johnson, "nobody wanted to give us credit. But we climbed the mountain, and we're at the top."

While whooping it up in the locker room, Seattle coach Lenny Wilkens and his players time and again credited the defence for turning the tide against Washington.

"We know when we play good defence, it makes us go," said Wilkens. "We take pride in our defence, and you saw what it did for us."

The Bullets, who averaged 114.9 points a game during the regular season, were held below 100 in four of the five championship games.

"Defence always beats offence," philosophized John Johnson. "Offence is like the weather; it comes and goes."

Trailing 51-43 at halftime, Seattle scored eight straight points to forge a 55-55 tie, only to have Washington retaliate with an eight-point string to go back on top 63-55.

"After that our defence tightened up," Wilkens said, "and the momentum swung our way."

Washington still led 69-66 entering the final period, however, before centre Jack Sikma — who had 12 points and 17 rebounds — launched a six-point streak to give Seattle a lead it never relinquished.

Elvin Hayes topped Washington with 29 points, 16 in the first quarter when Washington led 30-19, and Bobby Dandridge had 20. Starting guard Kevin Grevey played only three minutes before pulling a hamstring muscle and his running-mate, Tom Henderson, left early in the third quarter with an ankle injury.

Seattle's guards dominated the series, outscoring their Washington counterparts by 302-185. Williams led the SuperSonics with 143 points and Dennis Johnson, named the Most Valuable Player, had 113.

Washington coach Dick Motta congratulated the new champions, who became the eighth different team to win the title in the last nine years.

"I hope they enjoy it as much as we did," Motta said.

Indy war revived by invitation rule

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Less than a week after the Indianapolis 500, run under the cloud of a federal court-ordered truce, the apparent struggle between championship auto racing's two warring factions has resumed full force.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway, unable to define what constitutes "in good standing" with the U.S. Auto Club (USC), as stated on the entry blank this year, declared on Friday that the 1980 race will be by invitation only.

Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART), the breakaway group of car owners and drivers who had to go to court to get most of the sport's top names into the $1-million race, responded in disbelief and claimed the Speedway move was designed to break CART.

Speedway president Joe Cloutier said invitations for next year's Indy 500, the world's richest and most prestigious automobile race, will be extended automatically to those participants in all three USAC 500-milers this year — Indianapolis, Pocono and Ontario — and "any other races designated by the Indianapolis Motor Speedway 10 days prior to the closing of entries for such races."

Cloutier, referring to a central point in the CART-USAC dispute, also said the 1980 Indianapolis race will be run under USAC rules. And, in effect, he told CART it will not be invited back to Indianapolis unless it runs at Pocono on June 24 and Ontario on Sept. 2, the other major USAC races this season.

"I'm shell shocked," CART president Pat Patrick said when told of the Speedway's announcement Friday. "I just can't believe they did it."

Australian cricket Emus visit Victoria on Monday

There will be Emus in Victoria Monday.

These Emus are of the cricket variety and the Australians are the first overseas side to visit the city this season.

Australia's touring side of first-class players will clash with a representative team selected from the Victoria and District Cricket Association at Beacon Hill Monday in a match that starts at 12:30 p.m.

Steve Hanson of Alcos has been named captain of the Victoria squad, which also includes Tim Lord of Cowichan, Tony Quarless, Cec Mayers, Alec Porter and David Shaw of Castaways, Kortwright Richards of Oak Bay, Elvin Carter of Albion, Jim Wenman and David Gladders of Incogs and Peter and Michael Nation of Alcos.

Puhl's big bat haunts Expos

Times News Services

The past came back to haunt Montreal Expos in the person of Terry Puhl, a Melville, Sask., resident who once tried out for the Canadian team, but didn't make it.

He showed the Expos what a mistake they made when he went three-for-four, including a home run and a triple, to lead Houston Astros to a 3-2 win over Montreal in National League baseball action Friday at Houston.

Puhl said the Expos really didn't give him much of a look when he went out for the team as a teen-ager.

"There were about 200 players there, and the Expos just looked at the ones they had picked out already," Puhl said. "The only way a Canadian player could get signed was if someone pointed him out, and then he got a real good tryout."

Puhl, who was hitting .257 coming into the game, said he has changed his batting style a little and is trying to become a smarter hitter.

Houston got out of the blocks early, scoring two runs in the first inning off starter Ross Grimsley, 4-4. The runs ended a streak of 27 2-3 scoreless innings hurled by the Montreal pitching staff.

It was the 25th time in 53 games that the Astros scored in the first inning.

Elsewhere, Dave Kingman belted two home runs and a double to drive in six runs and lead Chicago Cubs to an 8-2 victory over staggering San Franscico Giants; Cincinnati Reds downed Philadelphia Phillies 4-2, Pittsburgh Pirates edged San Diego Padres 9-8, New York Mets downed Atlanta Braves 5-4 in 11 innings and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 8-7, also in 11 innings.

In the American League: New York Yankees blanked Chicago White Sox 4-0; Texas Rangers defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-2; Milwaukee Brewers downed Kansas City Royals 5-4; Boston Red Sox took a 5-2 decision over Minnesota Twins; Seattle Mariners trimmed Toronto Blue Jays 7-2; Oakland A's edged Detroit Tigers 3-2 and Cleveland Indians stopped California Angeles 7-4.

Island centres bid for games

Ron Butlin, British Columbia Games co-ordinator, said Friday that 10 communities are vying for the right to play host to the 1981 B.C. summer and winter games.

Butlin says bids for the winter games have been received from Fort St. John, Prince George, Dawson Creek, Nelson and Trail. Bids for the summer games have come from Chilliwack, Delta and three Vancouver Island communities — Campbell River, Nanaimo and Comox-Courtenay.

The two host communities will be chosen by the end of the month.

Beveridge finds mound perfection

That one-hit pitching effort Thursday was apparently just a warmup chore for Ray Beveridge.

Beveridge, who yielded just one hit while fashioning a 3-0 Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League victory for Elks-Athletics over K & R Sooke on Thursday, did even better Friday at Central Park.

This time Ray tossed a no-hitter and collected another shutout triumph as his mates presented him with six runs in a batting attack that included a two-run homer by Wally Popoff.

On the way to a 6-0 decision over Standlund Brothers, Beveridge struck out 12 batters and walker three.

In Heywood Avenue Men's League action Friday, Stan Pritchard limited Capital Builders to two hits and received 12-hit support, including Dale Ewasiuk's two-run circuit swat, as Brentwood Merchants trimmed the first-place Builders 10-2.

Now trailing the Builders by six points, Merchants also got three hits from Don Frampton and two each from Jack Lusk and Bob Lougheed.

Soccer Stunner

Times News Services

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Two years and two Soccer Bowl championships after Eddie Firmani was named to coach New York Cosmos, the popular South African was fired after a falling out with management.

The surprise announcement came Friday after Firmani was called into a meeting with the North American Soccer League team's directors. Assistant Ray Klivecka was named interim coach.

Firmani's dismissal stunned Cosmo players, and Firmani, especially since their 9-2 record is the best in the league.

In league matches Friday, Toronto Blizzard downed Atlanta Chiefs 3-1 and San Diego Sockers were clipped 3-2 by Chicago Sting.

More power expected

More power is expected at Western Speedway tonight for the second half of a two-night open competition for super-stock machines.

Most of the off-Island entrants scheduled to gun their power-plants Friday in the first half of Western's opening super-stock show of the season failed to get off the Mainland. That left the task of providing entertaining racing to Ron Eaton of Yakima and Victoria-area drivers.

It also forced a switch in format. Instead of running in a 75-lap feature, pilots of the 11 open super-stocks on hand raced in two 35-lap main events.

It also opened the doors for Joe Musfelt of Victoria to become the big entertainer of the evening. Musfelt zipped to a victory in the second main event and captured top over-all honors despite the presence of four of the Northwest's leading pilots — Eaton, Roy Haslam, Rick O'Dell and Roy Smith.

O'Dell did his bit for the J.R. Edgett Racing Team by pushing his new Camaro in front on the third lap and rolling to a victory in the first main event.

Haslam was second, followed by Smith. Eaton and Musfelt.

With the cars starting in reverse-order of their first-main finishing positions, Musfelt moved ahead midway through the second main event and turned back all threats the rest of the way.

Eaton took second place, followed by Haslam, Smith and O'Dell.

Earlier, Haslam had wheeled his Camaro to a track record time of 16:35.6 seconds, topping the former standard set by Smith last year.

Several of the drivers expected to compete were apparently thwarted by ferry lineups and decided to take in sports car races at Vancover's Westwood Circuit.

Speedway officials officials expect most of the out-of-towners to show for tonight's racing that will include a 75-lap main event. Time trials begin at 7.

Friday's results:

FIRST MAIN (35 laps) — 1. Rick O'Dell, Victoria; 2. Roy Haslam, Victoria; 3. Roy Smith, Victoria; 4. Ron Eaton, Tacoma; 5. Joe Musfelt, Victoria.

SECOND MAIN (35 laps) — 1. Musfelt; 2. Eaton; 3. Haslam; 4. Smith; 5. O'Dell.

Lake Hill Lawn Bowling Club contestants have captured the Wilf Sadler Memorial Trophy.

Ron Andrews, Flo Carpemter and Jack Carpenter won the 'A' final of the triples event at the Gordon Head club by defeating the Victoria West trio of Andrew, Margaret and Anders Gilstein 14-9.

Honors in the 'B' event went to Victoria West as Syd Smethurst, Agnes and Arnie Davies trimmed Burnside rivals Bert Image, Jessie Kinneard and George Sage 18-7 in the final.

Salmonbellies edge Burnaby

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Ross Angelucci scored the winning goal in overtime and New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies withstood a late rally to defeat Burnaby Cablevision 20-19 in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game Friday.

Herb Whitehead, Rod Sepka and Jim Cooper each scored three goals for the winners, who took a 20-17 lead in the overtime period before Burnaby scored two late goals.

Denmark stifles Canadian batters

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — Denmark beat Canada by 46 runs in World Cup cricket qualification play Friday despite scoring a paltry 118.

The Danes skittled the Canadians out for 72 with fast bowler Morild taking four for 12. The Danish victory at Knowle and Dorridge broke a deadlock atop Group Two. Both teams had won their previous two matches.

They had been scheduled to meet Thursday but rain forced a one-day delay in the start of the match.

Denmark was 118 in 57 overs; Canada 72 in 32.4 overs. Denmark picked up four points.

A dozen cricket-playing countries are battling the weather and each other for the right to join the West Indies, Australia, England, Pakistan, India and New Zealand in the World Cup finals later this month.

Fourth title for Neilson

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Massive Scott Neilson capped his brilliant collegiate career at the University of Washington by winning the hammer throw title for the fourth consecutive year at the National Collegiate Athletic Association outdoor track and field championship Friday.

The four titles in the same event made the New Westminster native only the second athlete to accomplish the feat, equalling the mark of the late Steve Prefontaine of the University of Oregon, who won the three-mile, or its metric equivalent, the 5,000 metres, from 1970-73.

Neilson, a pre-med student, hurled the 16-pound hammer 237 feet, three inches, only two inches short of the meet record he set last year but better than the University of Illinois stadium mark of 235-7 he established in Thursday's qualifying. His other winning efforts were 216-8 in 1976 and 228-4 in 1977.

However, although he also holds the collegiate record of 238-8, the 6-foot-5, 245-pound Neilson still is far short of his goal this season of 245 feet, a mark that would lift him among the world's top hammer throwers and make him a top threat for medals at the Pan-American Games.

Freshman Richard Olsen and sophomore Thommie Sjoholm, both from Sweden and both competing for Texas-El Paso, finished second and third, respectively.

And on the track, Renaldo Nehemiah of Maryland, top-ranked in the world, continued his mastery over arch-rival Greg Foster of UCLA, winning the 110-metre high hurdles in the sizzling time of 12.91 seconds, the fastest electronically-timed race ever run.

However, Nehemiah's time will not be eligible for world recognition because it was wind-aided. The allowable wind for such a race is two metres, or 4.473 miles an hour. Friday's wind was 3.45 metres, or 7.7 m.p.h.

For Foster — last year's NCAA champion — it was the ninth consecutive time he had been beaten outdoors by the Nehemiah.

McColl's Gowrie Lad takes Stepping Stone

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gowrie Lad, owned by J. Fraser McColl of Victoria, won the $10,825 Stepping Stone Stakes as expected Friday at Exhibition Park.

With Chris Loseth in the saddle, Gowrie Lad captured the six-furlong event for 2-year-olds by slightly more than one length over Radar Tested. Autumn Wings was third in the field of six.

Craig's birthday wish

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Front-runner Craig Stadler was confidently looking forward to a 67 in today's third round of the $350,000 Kemper Open.

It's his 26th birthday, and, as Stadler pointed out, "I've shot 67 on my birthday in this tournament the last two years. I'm looking forward to it again."

Stadler combined a solid 69 with his opening effort of 62 for a 131 total — 13 under par — and a four-stroke lead. But he may have factors working against him today of which he is unaware.

J. C. Snead, playing his way out of a prolonged slump, was talking with a friend after posting his second-round score of 65 when he suddenly paused, bent to the ground and plucked a four-leaf clover from a patch.

"I think I'm gonna win this golf tournament after all," Snead said.

With a 136 total, he was in third alone, a single stroke behind bitterly disappointed Jerry McGee, who fell from the lead back to second.

"I've never been in second place in a golf tournament after 36 holes and been as dejected as I was when I walked off the last green today," McGee said.

He finished off a round of 74 in a rain shower with thunder grumbling in the distance. It was 13 strokes higher than the 61 he composed to set the first-day pace.

"Today, everything went the other way," McGee said. "I didn't play that badly, but every time I mishit it, I was dead, frozen against a tree or something. But that's golf. I'm four shots out. I'm not out of it. I'll be back."

Both Canadians missed the cutoff at 144. Dave Barr of Kelowna had a second-round score of 74 for 145 and Jim Nelford of Burnaby shot a 76 Friday for 149.

LPGA leader doesn't mean to be greedy

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, admitting that she did not want to sound greedy, shot a two-under par 70 Friday to overtake Pat Bradley for the lead at 137 at the halfway mark of a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Lopez, who had a 67 on Thursday to trail Bradley by one stroke, closed out with a bogey six on the 18th hole after having gone eight under on the 6,410-yard, par-72 Wykagl Country Club course. It gave her a three-stroke lead over Bradley, who soared to 74 for 140.

The 22-year old Lopez is the defender here, winner of four tournaments this year and No. 1 in earnings with $103,475.

Canadian Sandra Post, second leading money winner with $94,908, moved from a six-way tie for ninth with a 72 to third place. She fired a three-under par 69 and was at 141.

There was no cutoff because of the relatively small entry of 73, three of them amateurs.

Dale Shaw of Victoria soared to an 80 and a two-day total of 159.

Victoria in front

Victoria broke a deadlock with Cedar Hill and moved into a 2½-point lead Friday in the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf League.

Fairway veterans from the Oak Bay links chalked up a 5-1 triumph at Gorge Vale while Cedar Hill was losing a 3½-2½ decision at Uplands.

In Friday's other contest, Colwood downed Glen Meadows 4-2 at the North Saanich course.

Nina Bland gains final

GLASGOW, Scotland — Nina Bland of Victoria and Susan Leo of Australia clashed today in the women's singles final of the West of Scotland hardcourt open tennis championships.

The 20-year-old Canadian advanced to the final Friday with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Lesley Charles of England.

Warehouse short of time, players

One more inning might not have helped the struggling Quadra Warehouse squad in Friday night's Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park, but the Warehousemen would still have preferred a last-inning shot at ending their losing streak.

Starting the game with seven successive defeats and only nime players, the Quadra crew reached the end of the sixth inning trailing Cosmopolitans 10-7. Then one player had to rush away to work, Warehouse had to forfeit the decision, Cosmos collected their second victory of the season and the league trailers were left with defeat No. 8.

Baptist church moves

Last Sunday marked the end of an era for members of the Baptist denomination in Victoria. The Douglas Street Baptist Church, after 67 years at 3277 Douglas, closed its doors before moving to a new church to be erected at 4065 Braefoot.

The church was packed for the closing service last Sunday evening when former pastor Rev. Jim Barton, brought the message. Barton, pastor from 1946 to 1952, was ordained to the Christian ministry at this very church.

Started as a mission work of First Baptist Church, Douglas Street Baptist has seen hundreds of people go through its doors over the years. Several young men have gone into the ministry from the congregation, others have entered other forms of Christian service.

The congregation started with 44 charter members in 1912 and now numbers 118, 40 of whom have joined the church in the last two years. The present pastors are Reed Elley, who began his ministry in 1976, and Jack Bingham, who became associate pastor in April.

The congregation will meet in interim accommodation at 1402 Vancouver for Sunday worship at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. It is hoped that the new church building will be ready for occupancy within a year.

Church sues for fire loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Historic Notre Dame Church, heavily damaged by a fire last Dec. 7, is suing the City of Montreal for $1 million.

In the Quebec Superior Court suit, filed Friday, the church alleges the water supply to its sprinkler system was cut off at the time of the fire, while repairs were being made on an aqueduct.

The fire could have been confined to the confessional, the church alleges, if the sprinkler system had been working. Instead, it almost completely destroyed the Sacre Coeur chapel and several pieces of art.

Perspectives

By Rev. J.H. Davidson

A good marriage is established in love, but is sustained only as that love develops and is given expression in a special pattern of relationships, a pattern delineated in the biblical notion of "one-fleshness."

Near the beginning of the Bible, in the second chapter of Genesis, we find this statement: "A man leaves his father and mother and is united to his wife, and the two become one flesh." Jesus quoted this to his followers, and it is also given in the Letter to the Ephesians. "The two become one flesh": that is the key Biblical statement on the nature of marriage.

But we must not misunderstand what that means. In the Bible "flesh" does not designate simply the physical body and its functions: rather, it designates the totality of personhood—to use currently fashionable language, the psychosomatic unity of the person.

The assertion, "the two become one flesh," does not pertain merely to sexual union between husband and wife, although the sexual, as an expression of love and commitment, is within its scope. In our time the sexual side of marriage is often given distorting and excessive emphasis. The sexual is indeed fundamental, but it is not the be-all-and-end-all.

Dr. R. S. Wallace, a Scottish scholar, makes this point: "While sex can serve marriage, it would be a perversion indeed if marriage were thought of to serve sex."

"The two become one flesh": the Biblical notion is that in marriage a man and a woman ought so to respond to, and to reinforce and sustain, one another's total personhood that a unique, and uniquely valuable, relationship is developed and nurtured—a relationship of "one-fleshness."

A marriage must begin with some degree of compatibility, but the real compatibility of marriage is an ongoing development, a process. It is not genuine compatibility that comes when one partner meekly indulges every desire and whim of the other—or even when some cold-blooded calculus is devised for deciding who will give in on what kind of issue. And it is not the sort of thing had in mind by a woman in a cartoon I once saw: she said to her husband, "I took one of those compatibility tests in a magazine today, and you flunked."

Compatibility is made up of all kinds of little courtesies and considerations and compromises, a sharing of jokes and laughs, sorrows and tears—and it must be motivated not by self-regard but by unselfish love.

Alfred Adler, one of the pioneers of modern psychology and psychiatry, said this about marriage: "Each partner must be more interested in the other than in himself or herself. This is the only basis on which love and marriage can be successful."

Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the young German theologian who was hanged by the Gestapo in 1945 for his active opposition to Hitlerism, while in prison shortly before his execution wrote a wedding sermon for a young couple he knew.

In that sermon he said this: "It is not your love which sustains the marriage, but from now on the marriage that sustains your love." Perhaps those words should be spoken at every wedding.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa).

Bishops open women's meet

Two hundred delegates and guests gathered at the Discovery Inn in Campbell River recently for the 51st annual convention of the Diocese of Victoria's Catholic Womens League.

St. Patrick Church of Campbell River was host to delegates who had come from all over Vancouver Island and as far as Holland and Africa to attend the two-day convention held in Campbell River.

On hand to officially welcome the guest speaker, Kamloops Bishop Adam Exner, was Bishop Remi De Roo of Victoria. The theme of this year's convention is The Year of the Child and in his address Bishop Exner spoke on: The Child: The Supreme Gift.

He pointed out the signs of rejection of children in our Canadian society and that we should be aware of the subtle changes which are being brought about.

He said there were definite signs that children were being rejected, it was now fashionable to have a childless marriage; we were exploiting children in our consumer society; the number of children being caught up in the battered baby syndrome was increasing daily; we were rejecting children by abortions and talking of euthanasia and asking what good the handicapped or defective are.

He said we seem to be measuring people not by what they are, but with what they can produce. Our sense of values is changing from: Can we make enough? to How can we make more? Is man to be measured by what he produces?

The guests were then entertained by dances by the Ukrainian Dancers, Bishop Exner on the accordian and an imaginary trip around the world where the travellers were greeted by a "child" of a different country complete in authentic costume.

Luther Court fulfils long-standing dream

Lutherans opening new seniors home

The official opening and dedication of Luther Court will be on Sunday at 2 p.m., marking the fulfillment of a long-standing dream of Lutheran Church of the Cross.

Luther Court has 58 low-cost self-contained apartments and 66 long-term personal and intermediate care beds. There is more than 8,000 square feet of activity space to be used for crafts, games, hobbies and programs. There is also an outdoor recreational area. The design permits handicapped people to move through all areas and a number of rooms in the long-term care unit is designed for their use.

An activity and social coordinator is on staff to assist the residents of Luther Court and the elderly of the community to become involved in the activities and services.

The pastor of Lutheran Church of the Cross, Rev. Alf Johnson, serves as a part-time chaplain. Auxiliary services are provided by the women of the affiliated Lutheran churches and other churches.

The society employs about 30 people. Through the administration, staff and auxiliary services, it is hoped to fulfil the principles adopted at the first meeting, that true Christian love and concern may be experienced by all who live at, or visit Luther Court.

The service will be held outdoors, weather permitting. Government officials and church representatives will be present and will speak. The public is welcomed to join in this happy event. Lunch will be provided following the service, and the building may be viewed by all who are interested.

Luther Court traces its beginnings to a meeting in 1971 when the pastor and some church members met with representatives from the board of social services of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada, and Services to the Aging of the American Lutheran Church.

At this meeting a statement of principle was adopted which in part states: "Believing that the church has a God-given responsibility to provide care for the elderly in her midst which goes beyond the provision of food and shelter, to provide also health care as needed, and above all, spiritual counsel and comfort, and believing also that this care should be provided in a setting that will enhance the older person's sense of being an individual with integrity and personal value, it is the purpose of this society to build such a home to provide this type of service."

In 1974 they incorporated as the Luther Court Society of B.C. with representatives from the various Lutheran Churches in the Greater Victoria area. The society negotiated the acquisition with Lutheran Church of the Cross and the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada of two acres of land east of the church.

The next three years were spent in research, planning and organization, and by November, 1977, the plans were ready. The architectural design was developed by the Wade Williams Partnership, and low bidder when tenders were called was Dura Construction, for the sum of $2,839,235. This was financed by a grant from the province of $433,000, and the balance from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation amortized at eight per cent over 50 years.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada and the Lutheran Church of the Cross, through its land adjustment and donations from members and friends, provided about $180,000 toward the kitchen, dining room, activity areas, and furnishings. The province has made a further grant of $123,000 for the activity area, open to all the elderly in the community.

Ruth Gowans with kneelers

Kneelers grace cathedral's floor

Many great churches in Europe and North America have been beautified with kneelers embroidered in needlepoint.

A notable beginning has been made for Christ Church Anglican Cathedral by Ruth Gowans, a member of the Chancel Guild, who has embroidered and presented two kneelers for the use of groom and bride at weddings at the high altar. They are in memory of her mother, Madeline.

The design is by Julio da Kunha, professor of art at the University of Delaware, and incorporates a cross in three colors: white for purity, red for faith and blue for hope, along with traditional symbols.

The materials are Persian wool yarns and the work exhibits cross-stitch, flat-stitch and basketweave.

Needlepoint is longwearing, beautiful in appearance and enriches the interior of any church. Mrs. Gowans is already working on a third and the cathedral has issued an appeal for anyone else interested to contact her.

The cushions will be dedicated Sunday.

Service for horsemen

The annual horseman's service will be conducted at St. Stephen's Anglican Church, Mt. Newton Cross Road, on Sunday at 11:15 a.m.

This service, nationally known, has increased in attendance each year. Some stables have made this a day's event, riding and having a picnic lunch.

Coffee will be served by the church afterwards at the hall. Riders and non-riders are welome, says Rector, Rev. Ivan Futter.

Hugh McCullum, national staff member of Project North, the inter-church project on native concerns, will be on Vancouver Island Monday and Tuesday of this coming week. His visit is part of a follow-up to the Northern Native Rights Campaign held across Canada and sponsored by Project North and native organizations during March of this year. It is intended also to help local action groups raise the issue of native rights with the newly-elected government of Canada.

McCullum will travel to Salt Spring Island Monday with the core committee of Project North Victoria, where they will hold a joint meeting with the Salt Spring Island group. On Tuesday he will be in Chemainus for meetings with the Inter-Church Committee on World Development Education there.

An 83-year-old man imprisoned in the Soviet Union on charges of "spurious concern for faith and religion" is not a member of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, according to Kathleen Piper, communications secretary for the Victoria church.

The man, Vladimir Andreeovich Sholkov, was sentenced March 23 to five years hard labor after passing on news about believers to Western correspondents in Moscow.

Mrs. Piper, quoting the Adventist Review, said press reports stating he had led Soviet Adventists for 30 years were incorrect.

"Adventist pastors in the U.S.S.R. affirm that he is not even a member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. He left this church in 1924 and in 1954 became the leader of a movement called 'Seventh-day Adventists of the True Remnant'," the Review reported.

Camp Columbia on Thetis Island will hold an open house 1-4 p.m. Sunday. Ferries leave Chemainus at 12:10 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. For information contact the registrar, 477-8364.

Basilea Schlink, who founded the Evangelical Sisterhood of Mary in Nazi Germany, will be known to many in the area through her literature.

A follower, Sister Lucia, one of the Lutheran sisters, will visit Victoria for public meetings June 11 and 12.

On the Monday, she will talk about the movement at St. Philip's Anglican Church, 2928 Eastdowne, at 7:30 p.m. The same time the following night, she will be at Western Community Baptist Church, 2612 Sooke in Colwood.

Flame in the Wind, gripping saga produced by Bob Jones University's Unusual Films, will be shown at the Beracah Bible Church, 5500 Hamsterley Road at Elk Lake on Sunday night at 7 p.m.

Set in the brutal Spanish Inquisition, historically accurate Flame in the Wind reveals the turmoil of a generation caught in a tragedy of history.

Garden island offers many attractions

Kauai, the garden isle

KAUAI, Hawaii — Where can you see Queen Victoria, "barking" sands, a sleeping giant, and a half-mile deep canyon reminiscent of the Grand Canyon?

The answer is right here on Kauai — Hawaii's Garden Island. It is rapidly developing a wide following of its own in an archipelago that holds so many diverse attractions for the tourist, say Western Airlines travel experts.

Kauai gets a little more rain than the other tourists isles of the Hawaiian group and its central peak, 5,080 feet-high Mt. Waialeale is said by climatologists to be te wettest known spot on earth.

However, the rain can be pelting down on the mountain while vacationers are soaking up the sun on golden beaches and under blue skies just a few miles away.

But the rain does help Kauai earn its "garden isle" title. It is responsible for the emerald green forest that can be viewed on a boat ride up the Wailua River on the east coast.

And it is responsible for the lush Hanalei Valley in the north, nourished by rushing mountain streams and checkered with taro patches.

The inexpensive boat ride takes tourist and accompanying Hawaiian musicians a mile or so up the Wailua River, Hawaii's only navigable river. Boats depart about every quarter hour from the dock at the river-mouth community of Wailua.

Passengers disembark from the cruise boat and take a fairly short and not too taxing trail through tropical rain forest to the Fern Grotto—a soaking wet cave shaped like a stage.

Hanging from the ceiling are clusters of maidenhair and fishtail ferns.

As you enjoy the grotto, the musicians who followed you from the boat play and sing The Hawaiian Wedding Song. Their voices carry into the cave from more than 100 feet away, illustrating the amazing acoustics of this remote forest theater.

The effect is so entrancing that it's small wonder that the song is sung almost daily at real weddings in the grotto.

But let's get back to the quiz.

The answers are that Queen Victoria's famous profile can be seen outlined i the Hoary Head mountain range and that barking sands is the name of a 60-foot high sand dune near Milolli State Park on the island's west coast. They make a barking sound when walked on.

The Sleeping Giant? He's the fellow you can see from Highway 56 near Kapaa. He labored had to build a heiau (temple) in a god's honor and was given a luau as a reward. But he ate too much and fell asleep. And he's still dozing there, his outlining a mountain ridge.

And the deep canyon. That's the geological wonder of Kauai. The Waimea Canyon ascends from the town of Waimea, where Capt. James Cook of the Royal Navy made his first-ever landing in the islands in 1778.

The canyon is 10 miles long, a mile wide, and about two-thirds of a mile deep. It can be viewed from several windswept outlooks as you drive up into Kokee State Park.

There are, of course, many more attractions in this beautiful island, where they filmed South Pacific.

And more and more visitors are getting off the beaten track and discovering them.

She runs insomniac tours

BALTIMORE (AP) — Audree Verguin was standing in the misting rain alongside the grave of Edgar Allan Poe. It was 4:30 a.m, and she was celebrating Mother's Day — one of 120 persons taking a six-hour Insomniac Tour of Baltimore, an all-night sojourn for tourists who can't sleep.

"This is my Mother's Day present," said Mrs. Verguin who with her husband, Elwood, of Toms River, N.J., were among the tourists who paid $25 each to tour the city in the pre-dawn hours.

The Insomniac Tour, created by Ruth Fader and Roxy Lipsitz, was started in November 1977. The two women operate Baltimore Rent A Tour, a business that offers daylight tours, too. "There really are an awful lot of night people in Baltimore, says Ruth Fader."

The tour ended at the Pimlico Race Course, home of next Saturday's Preakness, with breakfast and an early-morning look at the horses working out on the track.

Heading back to the downtown area, the overnight excursion showed the Insomniac Tour really works.

Dropping in to view Egyptian treasures

Impassive gods guard Abu Simbel's inner courtyard

By David Butwin

Abu Simbel,the reassembled monument to the pharaoh Ramses II, stands alone in the Nubian Desert, towering proof that 20th-century Egypt still can work architectural wonders.

In the 1960s, the colossal sandstone temple was plucked rock by rock from the edge of Lake Nasser and rebuilt on a man-made hillside 200 feet above the rising lake. The culprit was the high Aswan Dam, which not only created the lake but also threatened a number of precious monuments along the Nile Valley between Aswan and the Sudan border.

America raised about $15 million of the $36 million it took to salvage Abu Simbel.

Abu Simbel is almost 800 miles south of Cairo near the Sudan border, a trip that can be done in a day with the national carrier, Egypt Air.

However, overbooking is notorious in Egypt, and in general, travel around the country sometimes is less than smooth. Patience, though, usually will get you back to your hotel or on to the next one in time.

On the day I saw Abu Simbel there was extra incentive not to be bumped in Aswan: a reserved room at the Nile Hilton. In hotel-poor Egypt, a reserved room, anywhere, is a valuable possession.

Winging south above the desert in a planeload of French, Italian. Japanese and American day-trippers, I wondered how any form of life could survive on the crusted plain.

Suddenly, near Luxor, appeared the Nile Valley, a 25-mile-wide swath that wound like a shimmering green ribbon almost all the way to Abu Simbel.

On the descent, we swept over the vast blue Lake Nasser, dotted with brown, lifeless islets. Once you are on the ground, time is precious. Two buses make the short run to the temple, which can be seen from the airport hulking on the horizon, and in two quick hours you are ready to fly back.

Ramses II had the monument of himself built between 1300 and 1233 B.C. Four seated statues of the pharaoh guard the entrance, each towering to 65 feet. The remarkably well-preserved temple served as a place of worship well into Christian times, then was buried by the drifting Nubian sands.

On the side of the hill a doorway leads onto a huge concrete-roofed dome, which was built to support the reassembled temple. On a wall, text and maps describe the monumental salvage job. Abu Simbel, it says, was the most prominent of many Nubian monuments that lay in the path of the rising Lake Nasser. While the huge stone blocks were being cut and moved to a point 175 fet above the lake, a coffer dam was completed in a race to hold back the water. In all, the project took 4 years; it was finished in 1968 — 20 months ahead of schedule.

You must cast a careful eye to detect signs of the transplant, in either the main temple or the adjacent monument to Hathor, On one of the seated Ramses statues I could see an incision just above his beard. There were sighs of another kind — 19th century graffiti left by English, Italian and Greek tourists who etched their names and dates in the pharaoh's great blocky legs.

Inside, the temple is a ser-ies of interlocking chambers that extend 200 feet back into the hillside. Huge Ramses statues support the main hall, further evidence of the pharaoh's monumental ego. Yet he did not forget his favorite wife, Nefertari. She is represented in carved statues and beautifully pre-served wall paintings; Ramses dedicated the adjoining Hathor temple to her as well.

Several hundred yards away, beside the lake, is a grove of ironwood and mimosa trees with picnic benches where visitors can take shelter when the summer heat rises to well above 100. When I was there, it was a perfect 70.

And there's the friendly atmosphere of a country pub

Don't miss Suffolk

By Stan Delaplane

Overnight England turned from freezing cold to summer hot so we drove north through Cambridge into Suffolk county. The long green rolling fields and hedgerows John Constable painted.

It was sunny and 75 degrees! For the first time in a month, I took off my sheepskin coat.

"It's the first sun we've had since winter," said the girl waitress in The Bull where we stopped in Long Medford. She had blossomed — like the countryside — since we arrived the cold night before.

In the kitchen, there was a cheerful rattle of breakfast dishes. A bus boy was singing, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby."

Even the toast was lukewarm. (It's a tradition — maybe a law — that English toast comes to the table at room temperature. Which is usually 60 degrees.)

The Bull is one of the Trust House-Forte hotels. (There are 800 around the world.) They were dicey affairs. One would be a flowery paradise. The next you stopped at could be a flop house on Skid Road.

Then Charles Forte — (he made millions in other enterprises) — got a large part of Trust Houses. He put in quality control.

They are old coaching inns with fine bloody histories.

The Bull has been an inn since 1580. A hundred years later, during the Civil War, a local yeoman Richard Evered was killed in the entrance hall by Roger Grene. Stuck him with a rapier. (Or else I've been watching Errol Flynn late shows for nothing.)

After another hundred years, Charles Drew murdered his father who owned the inn. (Maybe because the toast was cold.)

It was Sunday morning. "Suffolk is almost untouched by tourists," said the owner of The Crown where we had fresh trout for dinner.

"The Cotswolds — the Shakespeare country — is so crowded you can't walk around during the summer months. Tour buses lined up side by side. Hotels and restaurants full. The tour operators don't seem to have discovered Suffolk."

They should for the prices are a joy. (The Crown charges $18 U.S. for a room. The Holiday Inn in London gets $100.)

This was green land that raised the sheep that made millionaires of wool merchants. They build great stone churches. Spires or square-topped towers they call "perpendicular design."

We drove through Kersey and Hadleigh. Bury St. Edmunds and Brent Eleigh and Monks Eleigh on roads only wide enough for one car.

The sides of the road were splashed with dandelions of pure gold. Little brooks wander among roadside trees that finally have leafed out in green. In the villages, front yards wore manicured gardens of massed scarlet and butter-yellow tulips.

"For some fortunate reason, these Suffolk villages never burned down," said the woman who was driving us. "The houses on the market square and the High Street are just as they were in the 1500's."

"A village started with a manor house — the home of the land owner — and a church. Workmen lived on the top floor of the manor house in very small rooms. About three people to a room.

"Gradually, workmen and craftsmen built cottages along the street. I imagine a pub was one of the first things to go up."

The houses are built on oak uprights about three feet apart. They filled the spaces between with a kind of cement. "Made of mud and straw and cow dung." It dried as hard as a brick. They whitewashed it, leaving the upright timbers so they make a pattern.

They must have been bright and cheerful little towns. You can see traces of faded paint on the beams. In spite of such fine weather, there were only a few people on the streets.

We found out why when we stopped at a pub for lunch. It was packed with farmers dressed in Sunday best. Ruddy-faced, noisy. Downing pints of brown beer they call "bitter."

So we had the "ploughman's lunch": Sharp cheddar cheese. Crusty fresh bread and creamy butter. Tomatoes and watercress. Ah, that English watercress! I could write poetry about it. Don't miss it.

150 years of buses

Horse buses will be trotting through London streets this summer, to mark the 150th anniversary of the capital's first bus service. That first service, between Paddington and the Bank of England in the City, was started in July, 1829, by George Shillibeer, a coachbuilder. Each bus was pulled by three horses, and carried up to 22 passengers.

George Shillibeer (1797-1866) certainly started something. Today, London Transport has no fewer than 6,000 buses carrying 4½ million people every workng day; and a railway system covering 256 miles of track.

Giant bluefin tuna fights to the finish off North Lake, Prince Edward Island.

Tiny town claims giant fish

By TONY SLOAN

In the waters off Prince Edward Island there's a species of giant game fish that has the tiny town of North Lake claiming to be the tuna capital of the world. A new world record set in October, 1978, substantiates the claim.

Wary and hard to catch, powerful and difficult to bring in, this heavyweight battler may weigh more than 453 kg (1,000 pounds). It's the giant bluefin tuna and even big game fishermen who have caught a score of these monsters over the years, still regard the struggle as the experience of a lifetime.

Tuna are migratory animals and have been known to suddenly almost disappear from waters that they have frequented for decades.

The hot spot for the past several years has been the Gulf side (Gulf of St. Lawrence) off the easterly end of Prince Edward Island.

North Lake is the home port for a fleet of 20 tuna fishing boats available for charter.

We had checked in at the Sea Breeze Motel at nearby Kingsboro and after stoking up on the lodge's famed clam chowder, we awaited the morrow in satiated impatience.

Tuesday dawned bright and breezy, too darn breezy. Our skipper, Walter Conohan of the Cape Light stated it was too rough to go out and we were declared blown out for the day.

Next morning Captain Conohan emerged from the cabin accompanied by his mateJoey and threw back the lid of a freezer filled with mackerel and crushed ice.

Two heavy duty, deep sea trolling rods pointed aft, capped by two massive Penn International reels wound with 130 pound test line. Regulations allow 9 m (30 feet) of double line only attached directly to the cable-strand leader.

We were ready to put to sea but the wind blew strong and the waves ran high.

The breeze was still brisk the next morning but all 20 boats of North Lake Charters Incorporated were heading out into the rock and roll of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

There were four of us sharing the $125 daily charter costs so this allowed each angler a 15 minute stint in the fighting chair every hour.

The morning wore on and the two mackerel 'daisy chains' crested and sparkled through the waves. We watched warily for the heart-skipping sight of a dorsal fin knifing through the troughs towards the baits. The mackerel remained unmolested.

We were still enjoying a noonday thermos of clam chowder when it was learned via the two-way radio that Walter Bruce of the 'Best of Luck' was hooked up and the battle was on.

You don't catch giant bluefin tuna in the ordinary sense of the word, you hook up. The term is probably a hold over from whaling days but considering the size these fish, the term is still rather appropriate.

Then the radio blared excitedly that Wesley Fraser of the Bay Lady was hooked up. This was too much for Captain Conohan, who established the location of the action and set out at full throttle in the general direction of the battle scene.

This is called 'steaming'.

We learned upon our return to port that the fish caught that day on Walter Bruce's boat, the Best of Luck, weighed 530 kg (1170 pounds), 13.6 kg (30 pounds short of the world record.

Several other fish were brought in weighing over the 453 kg (1000 pound) mark so it seemed only a matter of a day or two when the world record currently 543 kg (1200 pounds) would be broken. The monster-sized bluefin were here to be caught but would the weather hold fair.

Because of their enormous bulk, bluefin are not actually boated but are secured alongside with a gill and tail rope and towed to port. There, they are hoisted ashore via an electric winch.

The fish are weighed, photographed with the angler prior to being sold to a dealer and being shipped via air to Japan. Proceeds of the sale are the property of the boat owner.

Time was growing short for our particular group. If we failed to hook up today the only available fishing time left would be part of tomorrow and strong winds were forecast.

The afternoon wore on and still our mackerel strings sparkled invitingly on the sunny surface but there was nary a tuna to touch them.

Then, an Association boat, the Gena J, captained by Joey Hennessy hooked up within a kilometre or two of our boat so we pulled around to watch the battle.

Two of us actually boarded the Gena J for a first hand account of the struggle.

A husky young Islander named Thomas Lesperance was in the chair and had already worked up a lather prior to our arrival aboard. He had a long fight ahead of him, but it was worth it.

The fish weighed in at 442 kg (975 pounds).

In the two days out of four that we actually fished, a total of 13 giant bluefin tuna were brought in with at least three weighing in excess of the magic 453 kg (1000 pound) mark.

The current world record of the time was recognized as 543.6 kg (1200 pounds).

Three weeks later as everyone more or less expected, 18-year-old Mike MacDonald of East Point, Prince Edward Island, broke the world record after a two hour battle with a giant bluefin that weighed 559 kg (1,235 pounds).

Consolidated Tours Ltd., 188 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario M5H 3C3 offers a seven-day tuna fishing package that includes six nights accommodation at the Sea Breeze Motel, breakfasts and dinners, use of a Budget rental car for seven days and five days fishing averaging eight hours a day, all for $599 plus your airfare to and from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Contact either Consolidated or your travel agent for further details and bookings.

The 20 member North Lake Tuna Charters Inc. have introduced a new rate structure for charter services this year. The $125 per day for lines of 130 pound test remain the same but rates of $200 per day for 80 pound test and $300 per day for 50 pound test will be in effect for the 1979 season.

Tuna time in North Lake starts August 1 and ends in mid October.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, June 3, 1979
by SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get practical results. Individual who responds to call for help does have your best interests at heart. Don't permit pride to block progress. Libra and another Aries figure prominently. Work, health, relatives in transit are featured.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on speculation, impulse, style, children, getting to heart of matters. Strive for inedependence, originality; welcome new challenges, contacts. Yes, love is very much in picture — and so is Leo.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Security, family, saving for proverbial rainy day — these are highlighted. Older individual is on your side, believe it or not. Teach, learn, rise above red tape. Cancer, Aquarius, Capricorn natives figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relatives, short trips, messages in connection with long-range projects are featured. Diversify, ask questions, be versatile, give full rein to intellectual curiosity. You'll have something to laugh about tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Financial opportunity is solid — if you are thorough. Means do your homework, attend to details, plus loopholes. Accent on locating what had been lost, missing or stolen. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The "breaks" come your way; circumstances favor your talents, efforts. Be ready for quick changes, challenges to creativity. Write, advertise, distribute, perceive potential. Member of opposite sex lends moral support.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Court proceedings, hospital stay, temporary confinement could affect you. Taurus, Scorpio and another Libra figure prominently. Your peers present you with plaque or other symbol denoting appreciation, respect, honor. Dream could be prophetic, if properly interpreted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You look inward — you can discover what it is you desire, need. Cycle is such that wishes can become realities. You win support, gain allies, earn dividends through business investment. Member of opposite sex finds you fascinating and makes no secret of it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You gain added recognition — more persons consult you, confide in you — and expect more of you. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. You can finish key assignment. Superior makes room for you at top.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message. Finish rather than initiate project. You can be rid of burden not rightly your own. Let go, get ready for cold plunge into future. Capricorn, Cancer persons play key roles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain fresh insights. Key is to follow through, to take a more independent stance. Refuse to be intimidated. Avoid wasting resources. Build rather than tear down — be a comparison shopper.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check legal rights, permissions. Puzzle concerning direction will be clarified. Utilize past experience. Defer to wishes of partner, mate. Play waiting game. Gather data. Answers come in flash of inspiration.

IF JUNE 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are versatile, artistic, capable of getting message across in unique manner. You travel more than the average person. You are aware of body image, could have weight problem and you are attractive to the opposite sex. Your sense of humor is delightful, you often have too many interests simultaneously and you could love more than one person — at the same time. You are restless, energetic, have knack for languages, reporting, teaching, photography. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most significant month of 1979, a year highlighting production, responsibility, intensified relationship. If single, this could be a marriage year. If married, there might be an addition to family. Married or single, you invest in your own capabilities, you come back from emotional loss — you will again be confident and effective.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, June 4, 1979

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New chance is on horizon. Know it, don't be discouraged. New "evidence" comes to light and it favors you. Avoid lifting heavy objects. Love and logic now could prove an oil-water mixture. Protect yourself!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Steady pace is best — avoid extremes. Accent on dependents, coworkers, health. Keep resolutions concerning medical-dental appointments — and nutrition. An Aquarian helps you rise above red tape.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fun, games could replace recent gloom. Know it and reach for brass ring. Means you have right to create, to be happy, to imprint style, to broaden horizons — and to temporarily forget your diet. Another Gemini could help you celebrate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to the facts — be specific, direct, thorough. Aquarian could aid in relieving tedium. You are going to find escape hatch, to break through, to insure security and to prove a major contention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Movement, perception, writing, relatives, short trips crowd agenda. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Member of opposite sex is confused, confides in you. Key is to be grownup, to be honest and direct. If this you do, you open door to happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on collections, art objects, luxury items, domestic relationships, getting the most for your money. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio — and the number 6 — figure prominently. Diplomatic manoeuver pays dividends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Define terms, finish what you start, articulate emotions. Lunar cycle high — judgment, intuition, instincts are on target. Be direct, independent, confident. Views are vindicated. Long range plans are formulated. Distribution, publicity and display grab spotlight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Secrets, fears, glamor and inrigue grab much of your attention. Capricorn, Libra, Cancer natives figure prominently. Relationship intensifies — if you merely are playing games, get moving. Be discreet, not deceptive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on popularity, spreading the word, winning friends and persuading people. You gain wider audience. Persons with questions, problems are drawn to you. You could establish a lasting relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New deal in offing; you get chance to prove a point, to be creative and original, to get promotion. Superior sees you with "new eyes". Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Insist on maintaining your own style, self-esteem, personal touches.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good lunar aspect coincides now with journey, education, spiritual fulfillment. You are pulled in more than one direction. Instincts, hunches, one who guided you in past, play prominent roles. You'll have opportunity to "learn by teaching".

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be flexible enough to change course. Refuse to be "tied up" by obligation not rightly your own. Money is involved. Defend position, get credit due, make contacts, send out "feelers" and make inquiries.

IF JUNE 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are attractive, creative, stubborn, manipulative and on brink of greater success — emotionally and financially. August could be your most significant month of 1979, a year highlighting more recognition, long-range goals, completion of major assignment — the realization of some of your fondest hopes and wishes. This month, June, you could move, beautify residence, change life style, restore harmony on home front. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons play key roles in your life. You were independent early, could have been separated from one or both parents at a relatively early age. The "separation" could have been actual — or psychological. It left a mark, shaded your character, sharpened your sense of priorities and survival.

London Blacks fear 'sus', say it's police harassment

LONDON (UPI) — Lil Bickley fears for her nephew every time he walks the London streets.

Mrs. Bickley, a Jamaican-born social worker in London's predominantly black Lewisham district, is not afraid her nephew will be mugged. She is afraid he will be picked up by the police.

The charge: "sus."

"'Sus' is the burning issue right now," said George Greaves, 53, a Guyanan who heads the Community Relations Council in Brixton, "Britain's Harlem," and the surrounding area.

"Sus" is street slang for Section 4 of the Vagrancy Act of 1824. It empowers two policemen, who do not need witnesses, to arrest those suspected of "loitering with intent" to commit a crime.

Black community leaders charge that police use the law to harass young blacks, with the result older blacks are turning against the police.

Mrs. Bickley's 17-year-old nephew was waiting for a bus after work when the police picked him up on "sus." Convicted of loitering with intent to steal wallets from girls also waiting for the bus, he was given a three-month suspended sentence. He appealed and lost.

"The magistrate was half-asleep," Mrs. Bickley said. "Only one of the policemen came to court and he had lost his notebook. But the magistrate upheld the sentence because he said he couldn't believe any policeman would come to court to perjure himself."

Now, Mrs. Bickley said, her nephew is afraid police will arrest him again. If so, he would go to jail, lose his job and, with unemployment soaring among young blacks, probably never find another.

London blacks tell many similar tales about "sus."

"If you're black and 17 and you've not been picked up on 'sus' once, you're lucky," said Florence Wilson, 24, a British-born black teacher and youth club worker in southeast London.

Police spokesmen deny they operate on such stereotypes or use "sus" and other laws to harass blacks. They argue that police enforce laws necessary to cut crime.

"How would you feel if you called the police to say a man was loitering outside your house at night, and they said they couldn't do anything about it until he broke in and attacked you?" asked one senior Scotland Yard officer.

Police statistics show street crime and mugging has increased. In the year ended April 1975, 143 muggings were reported in London. By April 1977 it was 246, and police say it is going up.

In New York these figures would sound low. In Britain, where mugging was unknown until a few years ago, they fuel racist charges by the National Front, a vocal white minority group that advocates repatriation of Britain's blacks.

The Front blames blacks for the crime increase, quoting statistics showing 44 percent of London muggers are "colored," or a three-month study in Brixton listing 80 percent of muggers as "colored" and 85 percent of victims as white.

Conversely, blacks back their claims of police stereotyping and harassment with statistics showing 80 to 90 percent of those arrested on "sus" in London's main shopping street are black, although only one in 100 of those on the street is black.

Police say those who claim unfair conviction on "sus" charges can always appeal.

A senior officer said allegations of unfair treatment stem largely from bad advice from free legal aid centers.

"These people spread false information about rights and the law, so the kids feel they have been unjustly treated," he said.

Such theories do nothing to allay black fears that they are being harassed. Particularly in Asian communities, these fears focus on racial attacks — "Paki-bashing" — by white thugs.

Asian community leaders charge the police offer no protection against such attacks, yet do protect the National Front when it holds marches and rallies in areas heavily populated by blacks.

"The police are a bigger enemy than the National Front," said B.K. Chatterjee, an Asian community relations worker in London's Hackney district, where the National Front has its headquarters. "The National Front exists because there is police protection."

Both blacks and police are trying to eliminate fears and build trust.

The police have just commissioned a major study into their relations with Britain's ethnic minorities. Police and blacks are cooperating in liaison committees, and police visit inner-city schools to meet blacks.

"This program has to succeed," a Scotland Yard officer said. "We have to build trust to continue policing without arms in this country."

Magazine returns

LIMA (Reuter) — The political magazine Caretas (Masks) reappeared on newsstands Tuesday five months after it was closed down by the Peruvian military government. Caretas was one of 10 magazines closed down early this year for "endangering national security" when they backed a strike by unions in support of wage demands.

Deep war mystery about to surface

TOKYO (AP) — The recent discovery and partial raising by the Chinese of a Japanese ship, the Awa Maru, torpedoed by a U.S. submarine during the Second World War in the Taiwan Strait, may solve one of the lingering mysteries of the war.

Among the questions are whether the 11,249-ton cargo-passenger ship, on a mercy mission under agreement with Allied powers, was carrying contraband and $10 billion worth of treasure — including diamonds and gold bars — when four torpedoes hit its hull April 1, 1945.

Visibility was poor that day and the USS Queenfish's skipper Elliot Loughlin said he thought he had torpedoed a destroyer.

The Awa Maru was identified by a white cross on both sides of its funnel. The crosses were lighted at night. It was en route to Japan from Singapore where it had unloaded 2,000 tons of relief supplies for Allied war prisoners and was reported also to have aboard several thousand tons of aircraft parts and ammunition.

China said last week its salvage workers recovered remains and belongings from the ship about 17 kilometres off Fukien province of southern China.

Amin and Pol Pot booted, but tyrannies remain

United Press International

Invasions have ended two of the world's most blatant tyrannies, Idi Amin's in Uganda and Pol Pot's in Cambodia, but bizarre one-man regimes still abound in the world.

The international world sat on its hands while a Tanzanian-led force drove Amin from power and a Vietnamese-led invasion booted out Communist Pol Pot. Only Libya aided Amin for a time and China has been sending help to the remnants of Pol Pot's forces.

That same international silence, however, allows other one-man rulers — even a self-declared emperor and at least one president-for-life — to lord it in a host of small nations, most of them in Africa.

The potentates strut centre stage in former colonial regions that are not exactly household names: the Central African Empire, Equatorial Guinea.

Although Uganda, with considerable help from Tanzania, has rid itself of "Field Marshall Amin," the Central African Empire is ruled by no less than Emperor Jean-Bedel Bokassa.

Bokassa, who proclaimed himself emperor in 1975 after ruling the former French colony as president since 1965, emerged from the French army much as Amin passed through the British army.

A report by Amnesty International this month said Bokassa's troops killed between 80 and 100 schoolboys for rioting against a decree on wearing school uniforms.

But the heir to Amin, if wholesale killing of opponents is the criterion, may be President-for-life Nasie Nguyema Bigoyo of Equatorial Guinea, a Maryland-sized former Spanish colony on Africa's west coast.

Most of Equatorial Guinea's 7,000 Europeans departed in the early 1970s, and there were charges of a reign of terror in which 50,000 indigenous people were murdered by government forces.

Summary justice is swift in Africa's largest nation, the Sudan, where President Gaafar Mohammed Numeiri once marched leaders of a coup attempt from the courtroom to a waiting gallows.

Ethiopia, which lost its emperor with the dethronement and then death of Haile Selassie, is ruled by a collective known as the "dirgue" under the leadership of strongman Mengistu Haile Mariam. Its members are little known.

The dirgue justifies draconian punishment in the name of the collective, similar to the Pol Pot Khmer Rouge clique's emptying the cities of Cambodia in brutalized marches to achieve a purer agrarian communism.

Iran this year lost its autocrat, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, who left in mid-February, unable to stem Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution. But Khomeini's self-willed "revolutionary courts," decrying the shah's brutality, have summarily executed hundreds.

What keeps many admitted brutal rulers in place is "sovereignty" — the international principle of not disturbing another nation's territory.

Speaking in Hong Kong two weeks ago, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger summed it up, saying that while the Idi Amin and Pol Pot regimes were grotesque, their nations were sovereign.

"Idi was a monstrous creature," Kissinger said. "We should not do anything to support him. But for a foreign country to invade an independent nation is not acceptable."

All in a name

Bartering alive, well

LONDON (Reuter) — Barter, the oldest of man's trading instincts, is alive and flourishing in the West.

In little offices around the dome of London's Saint Paul's cathedral, the practice of barter — the exchange of goods for other goods with no currency involved — is smoothing the way for trade between the capitalist West and the currency-starved East.

A tightly-knit fraternity, barter traders see themselves as the world's last merchant adventurers, opening new markets where Western politicians are unwelcome.

With their diplomacy and marketing skills, they bridge the gap between businessmen and Eastern European bureaucrats, people who need each other but rarely speak the same language.

"We will deal in almost anything," says one London trader, whose job is to buy from the Eastern bloc anything from carnations to machinery and sell them wherever there is a buyer.

The barter system has been around much longer than money, but it has received an exceptional boost in the last three years as Eastern European countries find themselves increasingly in need of Western technology — but without the cash to pay for it.

One of barter's successes is the six-year-old deal between the United States and the Soviet Union — Pepsi Cola for vodka. In 1973, Pepsico Inc., started exporting to Russia as much cola as it could sell vodka in the U.S.

It has been so successful that 10 Pepsi bottling plants are planned in the Soviet Union.

The deal is a working symbol of East-West detente: The drinks company wins a vast new market and Soviet leaders give Russians a taste of Western luxury — all at the cost of producing a little more of two already popular products.

But why the upsurge in demand for the skills of barter traders in London, Vienna and West Germany?

Petar Jancovic, a barter trader with 15 years' experience, says the East Europeans "have come to appreciate the fact that they are no good at marketing."

He foresees growth in the business because the Eastern bloc is heavily in debt to the West and can only pay off the debt by exporting. But their economies are so rigid that they find it had to produce what the West wants — and harder to sell it there.

"You can't develop marketing skills before you approach economics from the consumer's point of view," he says. "East Europe takes into account only the growth of planned industries."

Some persons involved in barter say it is not such a cozy world of "industrial cooperations" — as the Eastern bloc prefers to term it.

They point to a development in which they charge that multinational companies collude with Communist governments to exploit cheap, strike-free Communist labor.

Criticism is growing over "buy-back" deals, where a Western company set up a complete factory in Eastern Europe and takes in payment a proportion of the factory's output to sell in the West.

The British chemicals giant, Ici, is helping to build two plants in the Soviet Union to produce methanol in a contract valued at more than $250 million.

In 1981, the Western partners in the project will start selling about 18 per cent of the plants' production abroad, some of it in Britain in competition with locally made products.

The growth of the chemicals industry in the Communist trade bloc (COMECON) will threaten the jobs of about 400,000 chemical workers in Britain alone, estimates David Warburton, national industrial officer of Britain's second largest trade union, the General and Municipal Workers' Union.

"The people who profit from buy-back deals are the multinationals and the COMECON state monopolies — not the work force," he says.

But Ici denies that there is anything sinister about its dealings.

"The Russian contract will enable us to maintain our export position," a spokesman says. "We shall continue to consume all British production."

Nordli survives

OSLO (Reuter) — Prime Minister Odvar Nordli won a vote of confidence in the Norwegian Parliament Tuesday, ending a crisis that had threatened to topple his minority Labor party government. The government survived the vote 80 to 75.

Job creation plan stalled

OTTAWA (CP) — A $101 million phase of the Canada Works job creation program that was to be put in place Friday has been postponed for review by the new Conservative government.

A job creation spokesman said that Canada Works and some other similar programs "have been put on hold" until fresh instructions are received from whomever Joe Clark appoints to the employment and immigration portfolio Monday.

"It's prudent to wait," the spokesman said.

During the election campaign, Clark said he would abolish Canada Works and some other job creation programs established under the Liberal administration.

Clark proposed setting up a new series of job programs, not dramatically different. A central feature would be a $90 million youth employment secretariat.

The part of the year-round Canada Works program that had been scheduled for announcement Friday is for community-based projects that would provide jobs next fall and winter. The summer would be spent sifting through applications, choosing projects and allocating funds.

The spokesman said department officials have no idea whether the Clark government will scrap Canada Works and other programs immediately or later.

"Who's to say what's going to happen?"

Other programs on hold include a portable wage subsidy system for persons such as tradesmen who get laid off, and the local economic development assistance plan to finance small, community-owned corporations.

The fate of these and about a dozen other employment programs are among the decisions the new minister will face in the large department which is also responsible for millions of unemployment insurance claimants and persons passing through the immigration system.

The new minister must decide whether to go ahead with new restrictions on unemployment insurance benefits that were scheduled to go into effect Sunday. Clark asked that they be deferred for review.

On the immigration side, there are no urgent matters, but the new minister comes at a time when a major movement of Southeast Asians refugees into Canada is under way. About 3,600 of a group of 5,000 refugees, mostly from Vietnam and Cambodia, have already arrived.

And negotiations with four provinces — Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia — toward federal-provincial immigration agreements are incomplete.

In the case of Ontario and Manitoba, discussions have been at only the general level. In the case of Alberta and British Columbia, talks have reached a more detailed level.

The other provinces have agreements already, reached when defeated Liberal Bud Cullen was immigration minister in the pre-election Parliament.

Victim Mario St. Amour tells tale of disappointed robber

Bum tip riles robber so tipster's in trouble

MONTREAL (CP) — A holdup man, acting on a bum tip that his victim was carrying $10,000, reluctantly accepted $500 Thursday and promised to return the sum once he "settled things with his tipster."

Mario St. Amour, 25, a steakhouse manager, was opening his car door after a visit to the bank when a man stuck a revolver in his ribs and ordered him into the passenger seat.

With the bandit using one hand to steer and the other to hold his gun, and with St. Amour shifting gears, the pair set off, followed by another car presumably belonging to an accomplice.

"He asked me: 'Have you got $10,000?'," St. Amour recounted. "I looked at him and said: 'No, I've got $500 in change.'

"He shouted at me: 'What? You don't have it?' So I told him to look in the money bags and check for himself."

The bandit began to curse.

"He told me his tipster told him that I was to have $10,000 on me," said St. Amour. "He told me he needed the money to buy drugs.

"As we were driving along, he said to me: 'You look like a good guy. I know where you work and I'll bring the money back to you. But first I'm going to talk with my tipster and settle things with him."

St. Amour was let out of his car about three blocks from the bank. Police found the car abandoned a short distance away but have not yet made any arrests.

The victim said he isn't holding his breath while he waits for the $500 to be returned.

House facing cost cut audit

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — As a first step in a possible move towards cutting costs Auditor General James J. Macdonell is conducting a comprehensive audit into the administration end of the House of Commons earlier than planned, at the request of Speaker James Jerome.

Last summer when Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced cuts in government spending Speaker Jerome conferred with Bob Coates, chairman of the Commons committee on management and members' services. He suggested the committee might want to take a look at the costs of administration of the Commons to see if reductions in spending could be made.

The operations of the Commons include members' travel expenses, offices, administrators, staff, phone costs, Hansard, staff in the Commons, members' printing and all the other services provided. It is up to the members to decide if there is to be a reduction in spending on such services, the Speaker pointed out.

The committee agreed and held meetings to hear reports from various directors involved in the administration. It was not satisfied with the replies it received in some cases, according to informed sources.

The committee and Speaker Jerome met in an in-camera session and it was agreed that Speaker Jerome should approach Auditor General Macdonell to conduct an examination of the administration side of the Commons. The auditor general said he had not planned to carry out a comprehensive audit of the House of Commons administration for several years, but at Mr. Speaker's request he raised the priority.

TORONTO (CP) — The two concerts given by Keith Richards and the Rolling Stones in Oshawa, Ont., on April 22 earned $50,132 for the blind.

John Magill, lawyer for the Canadian National Insititute for the Blind, said Friday he had received a cheque for that amount, which represents the proceeds after expenses, for the concerts.

Richards performed the benefit concerts as part of a probation order set by county court Judge Lloyd Graburn on Oct. 5, 1978, after Richards was convicted of possessing heroin.

Policemen's slowdown in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Policemen in the Montreal area will refuse to patrol city streets beginning at midnight tonight and will answer only emergency calls, their union has announced.

The Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood said Friday night it decided to take the action because the Montreal Urban Community has not been respecting the policemen's collective agreement.

"The guys are fed up with being pushed around by the MUC," Pierre Lenoir, vice-president of the Brotherhood, said following a meeting of 63 shop stewards representing 4,683 unionized officers.

"They've done everything to push us into the corner, and we can't strike, so what can we do?"

Lenoir said municipal police would remain in their stations "as long as it takes to settle the problem," and will answer only urgent calls, such as robberies, assaults and serious traffic accidents.

He said the action was a result of a deterioration of labor relations between the MUC and its policemen during the last six months and charged that the city had failed to respect a number of union grievances, even though Quebec Superior Court had ruled in favor of the union.

One grievance filed by the Brotherhood concerned a refusal by the MUC to promote 100 officers.

"It was upheld in Superior Court and in appeals court, but the men still haven't been promoted," Lenoir said. "They don't care about our collective agreement.

"They do whatever they want."

Recruit gays, police urged

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Association for Gay Rights has called on Montreal police to launch a recruitment campaign to hire homosexuals and disband its morality squad.

In a brief submitted Friday to the Public Security Council, the association also told the force it should "invite" policemen who are gay "to state they are homosexuals without fear of disciplinary action."

The brief is one of 75 submitted to the Quebec government body which oversees police operations in the Montreal area during public hearings on the role of the municipal force.

The association, which says it represents an important minority group that is constantly harassed by municipal police, called on the council to state publicly that it is not prejeudiced against homosexuals.

To show good faith, the association said the council should order that all charges be dropped against 140 persons arrested in a raid on the downtown Le Truxx Cruising Bar last October. It said that raid was one example of police harassment suffered by homosexuals in Montreal.

Keable probe under fire

MONTREAL (CP) — The Keable commission came under fire Friday from the Quebec Human Rights League for violating civil rights during its closed-door inquiry into suspected police infiltration of Quebec terrorist groups in the early 1970s.

Complaints by the league and a lawyer stem from recent hearings at which the provincial inquiry questioned witnesses thought to be former members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

The identity and number of witnesses — virtually the first who are not current or retired policeman — remains a mystery because of Keable's policy of imposing a strict ban on any public discussion of the closed-door hearings.

League official Jean-Claude Bernheim said the commission had limited some witnesses' right to choose the lawyer of their preference at hearings last week. Witnesses wanted to be represented by a single lawyer but were obliged to choose different lawyers at hearings last week.

Bernheim noted that there seemed to be a "double standard" in the case of civilians.

'No undue concern' over N-plant safety

OTTAWA (CP) — The Atomic Energy Control Board, the nuclear regulatory agency, said Friday that after a careful review it has decided "there need be no undue concern" over safety features of the nuclear power plant at Rolphton, Ont.

The control board made the statement while turning down a citizens' group request for a public hearing into the safety of the reactor, located 190 kilometres northwest of Ottawa.

The announcement came a day after Ontario Hydro officials, who operate the plant, revealed that leaks of radioactive heavy water have been the main reason the plant has been shut down for two months.

Provincial Energy Minister James Auld has said repeatedly the plant was shut down for routine maintenance. The heavy water leaks have pushed back to June 16 the date for re-opening of the facility, used mainly to train nuclear technicians.

The request by the Renfrew County citizens' group for a public hearing was delivered in late April to the control board in a 30-page submission after questions were raised about the subject.

The federal agency said in a news release that "on the basis of the technical information available, a public hearing into the safety of the plant is not warranted."

The control board also denied the citizens' group's allegations that the nuclear plant is being operated in violation of its licence.

"There is no compelling reason to shut down or limit the operation of the plant," the control board said.

A hearing into safety features at the plant would have been Canada's first public investigation of a nuclear power station.

The board said it is ready to meet the group and its legal counsel to discuss the situation. And it promised to release technical information on plant operations.

Lawyer Nick Shultz, representing the group, said in an interview the control board had failed to address a number of legal questions raised in the application.

The group was considering applying to the Federal Court to force the release of more information.

Space-age jacket by Fred Spur at ready-to-wear collection

London trying to lead again

By BERNADINE MORRIS

LONDON — The fashion houses here are making a mighty effort to regain the position in the world markets they had achieved in the 1960's. That's when London's mods, with their wide ties and miniskirts, set the tone for the clothes aspect of the youth revolution.

Philip Miller, the president of Neiman-Marcus, officially opened the London Fashion Exhibition April 2. It consisted of 400 manufacturers and designers who gathered at Olympia, a large exposition hall, and represented the largest number of fashion companies who ever showed their wares under one roof in the United Kingdom, according to the exhibit's sponsors. Three years ago, there were 80 exhibitors. "Britain is known for fine quality, sensible clothes that reflect good taste and quiet style," Miller told the assembled producers, and everybody beamed.

Not every house makes quiet, sensible clothes. There's a strong space-age feeling in the work Fred Spurr, one of the country's up and coming designers, has done for Midnight Blue. Short jackets, an array of zippers and fancy yokes and pockets contribute to the Flash Gordon look.

Silver, leather and sequins are basic ingredients at Timbuc 2 and a red jacket is combined with a blue jumpsuit at Number One Leathers.

Anthony Price, who designs for companies called Plaza and Secret Ingredient, produces stretch leotards and other body clothes and confesses a penchant for "a stagy, actressy look."

Then there are clothes for the working girl by Jane Whiteside and Tanya Sarne, two young women who call their new company "Miz" for obvious reasons, according to Miss Sarne. Seven eighths coats over narrow skirts are one of their ideas.

The mammoth fashion exhibit is just one part of the activities of the fashion week. One hundred firms showed their styles at the Inter-Continental and Park Lane hotels. Twenty-two others, known collectively as the London Designer Collections, showed at the Inn on the Park. A dozen avant-garde types, each a few years out of school, call themselves The Individual Clothes Show, and presented their styles at the Atheneum Hotel.

In addition, some 20 designers, including Zandra Rhodes and Jean Muir, the best known British fashion names, are planning indiviual shows. Sandwiched between the Milan ready-to-wear shows and the French ones, the carefully organized British presentations are an attempt to attract foreign buyers who have tended to bypass the clothes here in recent years.

They stand a good chance of succeeding if the fashion message is individual enough and strong, according to buyers from the United States. In Milan, except for the extraordinary strength of the major houses, they found a uniformity of styling that could make all clothes look alike in their stores next fall.

Among the people whose lines were being shopped on the first day were Victor Herbert, who started his business a year and a half ago and sells half his production to stores in the United States, includng Altman's, Bergdorf Goodman and Saks Fifth Avenue. He began with evening clothes, "because it's easier to get off the ground with them."

He is one of the designers at the Inn on the Park, considered a prestigious group. So is Benny Ong, who came here from Singapore 11 years ago to study design and opened his own company in 1974. His specialty is what he calls "throwaway elegance." His evening dresses, in crepe or chiffon, tend to have cardigan jackets bolstered by very minimal shoulder pads because "I think women prefer to look soft and feminine," he says.

The designers mentioned, all in their twenties or thirties, each has an individual approach to fashion. It may be just what the buyers are looking for.

Redecorating isn't child's play

Associated Press

Decorating a child's room is anything but child's play.

Of course, the decorating can be fun, but it is also challenging because the child you are decorating for today will be a pre-teen or young adult tomorrow.

"If the room is too cute, too adorable, the child will outgrow it," cautions Ann Heller, an interior designer who specializes in editorial decorating — creating those picture-perfect rooms that appear in decorating magazines and advertisements.

As a parent, she has used her own children's rooms as a kind of laboratory, decorating and redecorating them to try out new ideas, new colors, new patterns.

"In decorating a child's room I think it is important to stick with simple, versatile furniture that will grow with the child, and change with the child," she says.

"I avoid anything ornate — French Provincial for instance — and anything gimmicky, like the cowboy look for a little boy's room. That's because when it comes time to update the room for an older child, these pieces won't blend easily."

Furniture, she explains, should be simple so that it can blend with changes in the decor. And it should be versatile, to serve one purpose at one age, and another later.

For furniture that fits both these requirements, Ms. Heller suggests something in the Shaker style, or a parson's table.

The parson's table, for example, can be used to store and display stuffed animals in a young child's room. Later, it can serve as a desk or a dressing table.

Any decorating project is a matter of time, taste and money. And in decorating a child's room, Ms. Heller suggests investing your money in the permanent, "the things that will have an 18-year life span."

"I would put my money into a good mattress and box spring for the child," she says. "And I would invest in a good floor of polished wood or vinyl because both are attractive, durable and versatile."

Later, when the child is older, Ms. Heller says, carpeting can be added to the room, "but I would avoid carpeting in a youngster's room, because it doesn't take punishment well."

Finally, Ms. Heller says, she would invest money in "the kind of furniture we've been discussing — a few good, simple pieces that will never intrude on the room or the person living in it."

By investing in the bed, the floor and a few good pieces of furniture, you are then free to "improvise and have fun," Ms. Heller says.

"You can go crazy with fabrics, paints, wallpaper and artwork. And all these can be changed as the child grows up, and the basics will still be stylish and functional."

Moreover, if you improvise some inexpensive and attractive pieces on your own, you can change them or dump them without wasting huge sums of money.

Ms. Heller, for example, likes to create her own headboards.

"In one child's room I took two pieces of tall lumber, four inches wide and four feet long, and placed them behind the bed, on either side. In between, I can use paint or wallpaper for more of a headboard effect, and later, I can add another piece of wood to serve as a shelf."

Ms. Heller says that in decorating a child's room you should consult the child.

"Talk to the child and find out his likes and dislikes," she advises. "That's the way children develop their own taste."

Of course, she says, "consulting the child doesn't mean giving him everything he wants."

"That may not be possible or practical. But, then, he has to learn that, too."

Paper mache great fun for pre-teeners

By MAY E. MacLEAN

For those of you that will have pre-teeners at home this summer, here is a suggestion for the days when the weather is not too good, whether it be at the cottage or at home.

Paper mache, the art of building layers of paper over a mold to make a solid object, is great fun to do as well as being a simple and inexpensive craft. You can make simple things with out too much effort nd achieve great success, suggestions for beginners are bowls or trays. All you need is scrap newspaper, paste and paint.

First you will need an object to use as a mold, a flower pot, shallow bowl, pin-tray or serving tray. Grease the object you are using as your mold well with petroleum jelly. Tear the newspaper in small pieces about one inch square and cover the object with the paper, the petroleum jelly will lold them on.

Mix the wallpaper paste and spread carefully all over the newspaper scraps. Before it dries, stick another layer of newspaper pieces over the surface. Keep pasting and sticking layers until the object is covered with at least seven layers of newspaper and paste.

If you want a really smooth surface, paint the object with gesso, it is a thin plaster of Paris material, readily available in craft shops and when dry can be rubbed down with sandpaper.

The finished object, whether you have painted it with gesso or not, will have to be painted or lacquered and no doubt decorated too. Poster paints and even felt tip pens can be used, with a final coat of clear varnish or polyurethane to seal.

Paper mache must be left for at least two days to dry out thoroughly. Simple objects like flowers pots, bowls and trays slide easily out of their paper mache casings.

Balloons can be covered with paper mache too, and this might be a challenge to older children. Blow up the balloon, then using lots of tissue paper of one color, cover the balloon the way I have described.

When it is dry, burst the balloon with a pin and remove from the hole at the top. You are let with a round shape which can be decorated for mobiles or Christmas decorations.

Birdie all choked up by habit

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: My husband's a heavy smoker though he has been trying to cut down — for 20 years. Some nights when his card-playing buddies are over here, the living room is blue — with smoke, that is. By this time, Birdie, our parakeet, has been long since covered up and is, presumably, asleep. I think, though, that smoke must be bad for birds, too, because sometimes I kind of hear him coughing under there. — U.G.

DEAR U.G.: Smoking, even though it is secondhand, is definitely bad for Birdie. Those occasional noises emerging from his nighttime cover probably indicate your poor parakeet is gasping for air — the pollution-free kind. In vain, of course. Birdie would be better off in a different (but draft-free) location whenever that room is likely to be blue.

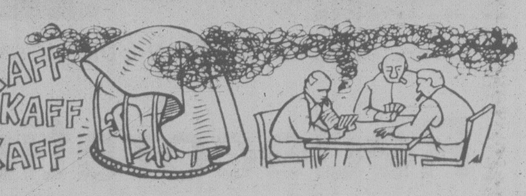
DEAR DR. MILLER: I am setting up a saltwater tank and I would like to be able to put as many fish as I can into it within reason. Which way should I lean — higher or lower — on the salt content of the water and on the temperature, to carry the most fish? — E.K.

DEAR E.K.: As far as water oxygen is concerned (one of a number of important considerations in the tank's fish-carrying capacity), the higher the water temperature and the higher the salinity (salt), the lower the dissolved oxygen content of the water. Hence, as far as this one factor (oxygen) is concerned, you would want to keep the water temperature and the salinity level both at the lower ends of normal for the fish being considered. Incidentally, you would also want to be living near sea level since the higher the altitude the less oxygen the water can carry, too.

A satisfactory marine aquarium must take into account many other factors besides oxygen content, of course.

For that matter, the concept of cramming in as many fish as possible is a dangerous one. The more crowded the environment, the more precarious it is for its inhabitants. As stress and pollutant factors increase, the resistance of the fish to disease drops and the likelihood of traumatic, intolerable environemntal changes increases.

Ideally, you would first set up your aquarium (marine or fresh-water) with a minimum number of fish and give them plenty of time to become established. If they are doing well, then you can gradually add more. Keep in mind the more fish you add — if you are pushing the tank's capacity — the fewer fish you will have (due to die-offs from disease) six months from now.



DEAR DR. MILLER: Which is healthier, a tortoise-shell cat or a calico cat? The calico is the one with white spots, isn't it? — G.N.

DEAR G.N.: Health would depend on the individual cat. These color differences are just that, no other cat characteristics or factors need be involved.

The calico does indeed have white on it. In fact, it is basically a white cat with solid patches of black and orange. The tortoise-shell is basically a black cat with solid patches of orange and cream (but no white).

DEAR DR. MILLER: A friend said acupuncture is being used instead of an anesthetic to operate on horses. I don't have a horse. I do have a dog, though, and wondered if acupuncture might replace other anesthetics for dog operations? — E.S.

DEAR E.S.: No, though it has proven useful in some limited procedures. While acupuncture might be useful in dulling pain in a specific area, it doesn't "dull" the entire animal. The lack of (total) animal control is a major reason why local anesthetics are not used more extensively in lieu of a general anesthetic. For practical purposes, the animal must not only not feel pain, it must also remain quiet during the surgical procedure.

To achieve this, then, the anesthetic must dull the mind as well as the operative site.

There are not too many sample products that are available completely free of charge. Most firms that come out with samples of their products generally ask for a remittance to help defray the costs of production and postage. Furthermore, there are regulations in Canada which strictly limit the distribution of many types of products.

Once in a while, though, a firm does offer to send a free sample. At the present time, you can receive a sample of white "Cloverine Salve" courtesy of Lambda Inc. Cloverine Salve is a specially formulated ointment that provides relief for chapped hands, face or lips. This ointment should prove very handy to sun bathers during the summer months, as it helps to ease the discomfort that accompanies sunburn.

To obtain a free sample of Cloverine Salve, write to: Lambda Inc., Dept. ML, 721 Sheridan Avenue, Cody, Wyoming 82414 U.S.A.

THROUGH-WALL BATHROOM FAN SHOULD BE MOUNTED AS CLOSE TO CEILING AS POSSIBLE

BY A. J. HAND

Q. — Our problem is excessive moisture in the lower bath. It has one small window, but no fan because of the upper floor. Whenever we take a bath, moisture collects on the wall and ceiling, then runs down to the floor. It has gotten so bad that the tile on the wall has buckled and fallen away. I would like to know if any company makes a dehumidifier. Also, if we install a fan, would it do any good, as it will have to be installed in the side wall, not in the ceiling? — F.D., Pinetop, Ariz.

A. — Sure, a dehumidifier is a very common item, and lots of companies make them. But you don't need one for your situation. A fan will work much better, and there's no reason why you have to install it in the ceiling. Just put it as high on the wall as possible.

NuTone — the biggest name in this type of accessory — makes a fan especially for your situation. It's the 8870. I'm sure other companies make a similar through-wall fan.

Q. — I am having trouble locating the Insulating Shade Co. You mentioned their R-17 window shade some time back, but my efforts to reach them so far have been unsuccessful. Have they gone out of business? — H.K., Trenton, N.J.

A. — They are not out of business, they just moved to larger quarters. They are now at P.O. Box 282, Branford, Conn. 06405.

Q. — I am interested in what you wrote on wood preservatives. I have used PCP for a number of years without realizing how toxic it is. TBTO sounds safer. I am primarly interested in using it in a greenhouse. Can you send me informaton on who makes TBTO, and where I can buy it? — H.R., M.D., El Paso, Texas.

A. — TBTO is produced by M&T Chemicals under the name bioMeT TBTO. I'm not sure the stuff is for sale direct from M&T, but I do know it is included in some exterior stains. If you are interested in a greenhouse wood preservative, Cuprinol makes a preservative called Green No. 14 for Florists. If you can't find it locally, write to the Daworth Co., P.O. Box K, Tower Lane, Avon, Conn. 06001.

Jewelry louder

PARIS (CP) — Fall will not be the season for quiet, simple jewelry if French designers have their way. At the recent showing of the fall collections, big, attention-getting pieces were the rule, with designers zeroing in on long, tassel necklaces, wind chime earrings, beaded chokers and bright enamel pins.

Surgery often followed by emotional letdown

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I had a hysterectomy operation two months ago. Since then I've been extremely nervous and can't get back to myself. I'm highstrung and can't sleep. Is this unusual following a hysterectomy? Where can I get more information about it? — Mrs. R.A.

DEAR MRS. A.:

Surgery is frequently followed by a period of weakness, fatigue and nervousness. Any operation under general anesthesia is a trauma to the physical and emotional reserve of the patient.

It is unreasonable to expect that the body can immediately recover its strength so as to allow you to go right back to full activity.

The removal of the uterus carries with it a degree of psychological strain superimposed on the surgery itself. Many women who have had a hysterectomy take a particularly long time to recover from the emotional impact of this operation.

No booklet or medical column can substitute for the vital information your own doctor can supply. Today, all doctors and surgeons know that a operation alone is not considered the end of treatment. Psychological support is given in addition to the vitamins, nutrition and rest so important in the post-operative convalescent period.

An operation is really not considered complete until the patient is able to function with restored physical and emotional strength.

You have a perfect right, after such a short time, to have the feelings you describe. With patience, removal of emotional tress, and added rest you will soon be restored to your previous level of energy and calm. There are now excellent tranquilizing drugs that can carry you through this particularly restless period.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I'm 23 and my husband is 31. We've been married for two years and have no children. He has a small business and I have a full-time job. We have separate chequing accounts and separate lives. He refuses to discuss his business or income with me.

He is never at home at night and I never know where he is. He stays out almost every night and I never know where he is. He stays out almost every night until the bars close, and on weekends he's never at home even in the daytime.

I got so fed up with being alone, I left him once. When I try to talk to him about our problems, it helps for a few days, then he goes back to his old ways. What should I do?

LEFT ALONE

DEAR LEFT: Nowhere in your letter do you mention "love." Why did you marry? Surely not to have separate lives. As I see it, your husband enjoys being married as long as he can live like a bachelor. If you want a real marriage, free yourself from this empty, in-name-only relationship and find a man who wants to be a full-time husband.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has promised to abide by your decision. Our problem is his snoring. He starts to snore the minute he dozes off, and he snores like a bull.

I have put up with his snoring for the seven years we've shared the same bed. Not once have I nudged him or asked him to roll over because I didn't want to disturb his much-needed sleep.

However, I complain bittely when he insists on falling asleep in the living room while I'm trying to watch TV.

When I complain he says he enjoys dozing off with the TV on, that it's his living room, too, and I am being unreasonable.

I say that he is being unreasonable to subject me to his snoring while I'm trying to watch TV.

What is your verdict?

BOTHERED

DEAR BOTHERED: I hereby declare the living room off limits for snoozing. If hubby enjoys dozing off with the TV on, let him get a portable TV for the bedroom and snore to his heart's content.

Furthermore, if you continue to suffer in silence every night while your husband snores like a bull, I order a psychiatric examination for you! (You are either a masochist or a martyr.) Get some earplugs. Court adjourned.

THE MAGIC OF JEWELRY

(Part I)

The role of jewelry in human civilization has gradually evolved over the centuries.

There is evidence that man wore jewelry as early as 25,000 B.C. Of course, this might only have been a string of shells or bones. At that time, it was not only a question of adornment. Man believed that he could ward off the dangers that threatened his life and happiness by wearing a trinket of some kind, and this idea was carried on and developed through the Middle Ages.

Amethyst, a rich purple gemstone, became associated with wine and as such developed the reputation of being a protection against intoxication. The word "amethyst" comes from the Greek "amethustos" which means "not drunk."

The beautiful green emerald was thought to strengthen one's memory and quicken the intelligence. Women considered it a protection against ills, particularly those connected with childbirth. It was also believed to make one more economical, therefore leading one on the road to wealth.

Asiatic peoples, and even Southwest American Indians, used red garnets as bullets, believing that their rich, glowing color would cause more deadly wounds. Powdered red garnet was once used as a cure for fever; yellow garnet was used to treat jaundice. If the powders failed, the apothecary was accused of using a substitute.

In my next article, I'll cover another aspect of jewelry's magic: its role as a status symbol.

Work for week

When buying plants, even the annual bedding plants, keep tags or make a written note of kind and variety while still at the plant stand. This information is useful for another year or for helping friends with planning.

If weather seems settled, tomato, squash, cucumber, pepper, eggplant and okra go out. Do not disturb roots; be prepared to shield from hot sun for a day or two or from cold nights if necessary.

Thinning, hand weeding, watering and sowing successions of vegetables will be the work this week to maintain constant supply of succulent edibles from home garden and allotment.

As German (Bearded) Iris and other types develop faded flowers, remove promptly.

Cut off old flower trusses from lilacs at base without spoiling new growth just beside. Only needed on young plants. Water well in summer, mulching bare surface soil with loose compost.

Sow white turnip with radish seed. Both have edible tops. It is believed by some gardeners that radish sown between cabbage may lessen root maggots damage to cabbage.

Fertilizer useless far from roots

GARDENING

jack beastall

Plants are fixtures, which is probably a good thing. It would be disturbing to look out of the windows and see the apple tree on the other side of the garden, and the camellia in the neighbor's garden.

Yet I am quite sure this would happen if plants were not firmly anchored to the soil, for we rarely provide them with an ideal position, and we could hardly blame them for seeking a warmer or cooler spot, or a soil that would provide more nutrients.

Some plants do move within a limited range. These are the kinds which quickly exhaust the food supply within the area of their roots and send out underground runners to make new plants in adjoining richer soil.

Since plants cannot roam around looking for food it is necessary for the gardener to put food within reach of their roots.

Reviewing a few pertinent facts may help us to do a better job of feeding our plants.

First, a plant takes its food through its roots. It can also feed through its leaves, but foliar feeding is not common in the average garden.

Fast growing plants develop an extensive root system which is necessary to obtain the quantities of food to support the rapid growth. Slow growing plants have comparatively small root systems, and depend on the food available from the soil immediately surrounding their feeding roots.

Secondly, feeding roots are covered with a membrane through which liquids permeate. Plant food must always be in the form of a solution before it can enter plant tissues. The solvent is water and the food we apply is chemical salts in a form which is readily soluble in water.

Thirdly, if we agree that plants are fixtures the food in solution must surround the feeding roots. A plant could be in a rich soil, yet starve if the food is an inch or so beyond reach of its roots.

Water moves down through the soil fairly easily, but has greater difficulty in moving sideways. This is important when it comes to getting water and food to the roots of plants which have a considerable spread of foliage.

Moisture is absorbed very slowly by dry soil, the water finding it easier to run over the slightly loosened surface particles which it can easily surround, than make a path downwards around particles which are compacted.

When we apply fertilizer to a soil of average dryness as found in most gardens after the end of April, we distribute the fertilizer crystals as evenly as possible around the plant, scratch them lightly into the surface soil, then apply what we consider to be sufficient water to do a good job.

If we came back the next day with a hand trowel and dug a small hole at the edge of the watered section we should find the moisture had penetrated about two inches. No food, or water, had reached anywhere near the eight to ten inches where the plant roots are growing.

It often happens that the plant does not receive any of that food until sufficient rain has fallen in October and November to thoroughly saturate the soil and carry the food down to where the roots can reach it.

This is an important fact for home gardeners to understand. When food reaches the roots of plants that arenot completely dormant, they pick it up and start making growth.

In our mild fall climate this is often the cause of heavy plant losses when the weather turns cold for a few days in late December or early January. The plants have just obtained the food they should have had the previous summer for making growth that would have hardened in the fall. Made late in the fall this soft growth is vulnerable to low temperatures.

To get food to the roots within a short while after it has been applied to the surface soil we must provide a path down which the fertilizer solution can travel easily. Such a path is soil which is damp from the surface to below the level of the roots.

The amount of watering necessary to reach this depth will vary according to the condition of the soil and the type.

Until one is familiar with soil on the property, small test holes dug 12 inches deep with a trowel will be needed to determine soil moisture at that depth. If gardeners would use these test holes often they would find the answer to many plant growth problems.

The dry fertilizer is spread evenly around the plant, usually at about one-half the amount suggested by the manufacturer, and wetted with a dash of water.

After three or four hours, preferably the following day, the powder will be softened and readily mix with water to form the solution needed. The gardener then applies the water that is to carry the food to the roots. If this second watering is done as soon as the fertilizer is applied, the water will sink but the nutrients will not form a solution.

This method applies to all plants whether in pots, tubs, planters, or open soil. Liquid fertilizers mixed with water require the same wetting of the soil to the root area before application as needed for dry fertilizers.

Many gardeners just pour the liquid mixture around the plants and think the plants are fed. As with the powdered fertilizers, the liquid fertilizer will remain in the top soil until sufficient rain carries it to the roots in fall.

Fertilizer is not so essential as advertisers would have us believe, and most of it is wasted when applied to a soil low in humus. Humus comes first, followed by fertilizer if the plants show a definite need for it.

Unnecessary applications of fertilizer cause rank soft growth which is vulnerable to insects and diseases. It promotes growth at the expense of flowers and fruits, or seeds, and can cause new growth to be made in late summer when the plants should be hardening the growth already made.

There are many fertilizer mixes on the market, each compounded for a definite type of plant or soil. Acid mixes are for plants which must have an acid reacting soil. Lawn mixtures differ according to local climate and soils, the best results being obtained when a mix designd for local soils is used. There are mixes for tuberous and bulbous plants, African Violets, root crops and leaf vegetables. There are also plants that should never be given fertilizer.

Sterilization solving warble grub problem

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — A federal government insect researcher says he may be well on the way to wiping out the troublesome warble grub, a pest that costs cattle farmers millions of dollars each year.

For more than 16 years, Jerome Weintraub has been studying the warble grub, which eats into cattle hides.

Recently he has been considering a United States-developed theory that radiation of male insects can help get rid of unwanted species.

His pilot project at a ranch near Lethbridge has been successful in the eradication of one of the two problem warble species, he says.

The three-year-old project now is shifting its focus from the common warble grub to the other species, the northern grub.

Weintraub says the timely release of male warble flies rendered sterile by radiation cannot alone wipe out the problem.

The method does work, though, when combined with insecticides. Insecticides now form the basis of Alberta's extensive warble control program.

But they alone cannot eradicate the grub either, since a few always escape. The insects have tremendous reproduction potential.

"The U.S. department of agriculture is interested in a co-operative project with my team and we've had preliminary discussions to enlarge a 1,000-square-mile test area, perhaps straddling the border," Weintraub says. "I think I can prove there that the warble grub can be eradicated."

Weintraub's background research involved such things as finding a way to make warble flies mate in a laboratory. Males and females were dangled from cotton threads to simulate the necessary flying position.

The resulting eggs are collected so newly-hatched larvae an be injected into the test cattle to achieve heavy infestation.

The larvae normally dissolve into their hosts' skin. Nine months later, when the grubs are ready to pupate, they would normally drop to the ground from warbles (cysts) they have formed on the hides.

But Weindtraub collects the grubs in canvas girdles suspended beneath the cattle. During the pupa stage, they are sent to a research station in Summerland, B.C., for irradiation.

Weintraub and his team are beginning to detect slight differences between male and female pupae, but at this stage, everything is irradiated.

The sterile flies are released in specific mating areas in large enough numbers to overwhelm the few wild flies that might have survived insecticides.

U.K. roads safer now

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — A recent report says that motoring in Britain is far safer than it was 20 years ago despite the fact that traffic has more than tripled since 1958.

"Accident rates have fallen to about one-third of the 1958 level," says the report issued by the British Road Federation.

"The chief reasons are better driving instruction, improved vehicle design and new traffic laws."

Graffiti crackdown

EDMONTON (CP) — Graffiti artists are perfecting their wit on post office walls but management isn't laughing.

The internal security division of the city's main postal centre has asked some workers to provide handwriting samples.

Edd Langelier, western technical representative for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the union has asked shop stewards to advise workers that there is nothing requiring them to follow the security request.

He said the graffiti generally involves "nasty" sayings about some of the post office supervisors.

SUMMERTIME weather prompts a Calgary resident to put his feet up and absorb the sun's rays beaming down on the grass-covered hillside of an island park just a stone's throw from the city core.

$100 utility deposits planned by Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Utilities customers who have been poor credit risks may have to pay a $100 deposit for city telephone and utilities services, if council approves the plan.

The proposal is aimed at reducing the number of utility debts, which the utilities and engineering committee says amount to an $832,000 loss each year. The plan, which could be in force as early as August, could cut $254,000 from the annual loss, the committee believes.

The deposit would be divided into telephones, $25, water and sewer, $25, and power, $50.

H. B. Fraser, city utilities manager, told the committee Tuesday his department would define a poor credit risk as:

Customers who have had service disconnected twice within a year for non-payment of bills;

Customers who have paid accounts with NSF (non-sufficient funds) cheques twice within six months;

Those who have obtained services under a false name

Unrelated joint users of services, who share the same premises and apply for services in turn to avoid paying after the utilities had been previously disconnected for non-payment.

Spring rains not so sweet

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan beekeepers are worried about the effect a late, wet spring will have on this year's honey crop.

"Food is the major problem right now," says John Gruszka, provincial apiculturist with the agriculture department.

"Usually by this time of year honey bees can gather pollen and nectar from early-blooming plants, but that is not the case this year."

Farm land price up 20%

EDMONTON (CP) — Farm land prices rose 20 to 25 per cent during the last farm year compared with an average of five to 10 per cent in the previous four years, says farm realtor Ivan Hardy.

The last major jump was four years ago when increasing grain prices brought farm land prices up by 15 to 20 per cent.

Hardy attributes the most recent increase to the current shortage of beef.

Road widening urged

CALGARY (CP) — Widening of a 13-kilometre stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway in Banff National Park is essential if the road is to accommodate an increasing number of tourists, says an official of the federal public works department.

Frank Kimble, chief of the highways program for the Prairies, said the widening would have "environmental consequences" but they were outweighed by the advantages.

Gun tags lacking

EDMONTON (CP) — A spokesman for the solicitor-general's department says a large percentage of Alberta hunters has yet to obtain proper certification.

George Reid, chief provincial firearms officer, said Albertans planning to purchase or borrow firearms during any of the hunting seasons this year must acquire a firearms acquisition certificate.

Public hearings denied

EDMONTON (CP) — Special public hearings will not be held into the Odyssey recreational development proposed for the foothills area around Nordegg, 200 kilometres southwest of Edmonton, according to Lands Minister Bud Miller.

Rejecting a call for hearings from Opposition Leader Bob Clark, Miller said public hearings into eastern slopes development in 1973 included the project and further public submissions are not necessary.

Clark said Rocky Mountain House-area residents have complained about the Odyssey site, suggesting it should be moved to what he said are environmentally-less-fragile areas closer to Rocky Mountain House.

Heritage code

EDMONTON (CP) — Municipal governments now can protect buildings they believe have historic interest to the community, Alberta Culture Minister Marry LeMessurier has announced.

Three recently acted sections of the Alberta Historical Resources Act give municipal governments the power to designate historic sites within their jurisdictions.

Historic designation, which protects the structures from demolition, had previously been the sole authority of the provincial government.

Awards to students

Three of four top cash prizes in the 1979 Helen Pitt Graduate Awards competition were captured by students of the University of Victoria's visual arts department.

Richard Putz, a sculptor, Grant Baker, photographer, and Sydney Condrashoff, painter, each won $3,750 in the competition. Tom Robertson of the Emily Carr College of Arts was the fourth winner. The three are among 11 students chosen to exhibit in the Helen Pitt Graduate Exhibition which opens Wednesday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Three other UVic visual art students join the winners in the exhibition. They are sculptors Wayne Morrison and Bryce Thompson, and painter Janis Ward.

Students graduating in fine arts from UVic, the University of B.C. and the Emily Carr College of Art were eligible for awards in the categories of painting, sculpture, photography, drawing and print-making.

The winners shared a total of $15,000 in awards money. Judging was by an independent jury consisting of Jessica Bradley, writer and lecturer on art at Ottawa University, and Christopher Varley, chief curator of the Edmonton Art Gallery.

The Helen Pitt Awards were established in 1978 by the Vancouver Foundation as an annual exhibition and awards program at public art schools. Works are selected as the most promising of the year's graduating class.

Dr.J.D.McGann, executive director of the Vancouver Foundation, will open the exhibition Wednesday and present the awards at that time. The works will remain on view through July 15.

An exhibition of primitive pottery by Laura Wee Lay Laq opened today at Art Mosaic Gallery, 910 Government (in Harbour Square). Laura attended the Vancouver School of Art (now the Emily Carr Art College) until 1977 and since then has been teaching adult classes in handbuilding and primitive firing, raku and functional handbuilding for the Burnaby Art Centre.

She is a member of the Salish and Kwakuitl cultural groups and has won various awards for her work in the last few years, including a Mungo Martin Award.

Laura's exhibition will continue through June 16.

A six-week exploration of video as performance, art object, production and stay-at-home art event was initiated this week at Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort. The designer and co-ordinator is Chris Creighton-Kelly.

Participation is encouraged through being on hand for the viewings and discussions, attending the video performance pieces June 23, July 6 and 7; creating one's own "under three minute" video work, Thursdays from 4 to 8 p.m., watching the collaboratory show on cablevision Thursdays at 6 p.m., or contributing to the production of the cablevision works behind or in front of the cameras.

The video performance events will feature (June 23) Bill Bartlett in a specially created piece incorporating slow-scan and real time images; and (July 6 and 7) Hugh MacPherson with a new work combining video and movement.

The viewing and discussion series will take place on Tuesdays at 8 p.m. The creative "under three minute" series will make equipment and advice available to all interested in producing a one camera video tape. Some of these will be shown on July 3 at Open Space.

The video collaboratory event will continue through July 7.

More than 30 Indian artists are currently represented in an exhibit of contemporary India art and crafts at the University of Victoria Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery. The show is circulated by the National Museum of Man in Ottawa and will close Wednesday.

Included in the exhibit are paintings, prints, carvings, drawings, jewelry, beadwork, embroidery and ceramics. The artifacts represent the work of individuals and groups from the west coast, the plains and eastern woodlands.

Among the artists participating are well known Indian carvers Henry Hunt and his son Tony, creators of the totem poles at UVic's Cornett Building. A silkscreen by Bill Reid entitled Dog Salmon is also on view.

Other artists whose work is to be seen include Violet Fourhorns, John Blueboy and Bella Bonnetrouge.

The gallery is open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Opera director honored

EDMONTON (CP) — Nicholas Goldschmidt, the first director of the opera school at the Royal Conservatory of Music, has been named winner of the University of Alberta's 1979 national award in music.

Goldschmidt, described as a vital force in the creation of the Canadian Opera Company, has also worked in San Francisco and at Columbia and Stanford universities since arriving in North America in 1937.

Now 71 and a resident of Toronto, Goldschmidt will receive the award at a ceremony in Banff, Alta., on July 6.

CONTROVERSIAL country singer and self-proclaimed balladeer of the working class, Johnny Paycheck, who has started mini-revolutions with his Epic hit single Take This Job and Shove It, comes to Memorial Arena Saturday, June 9. He will be accompanied by the Flying Burrito Brothers. Formation of the Burritos in 1968 — one of numerous spin-offs from the Byrds — marked the first full-scale exploration by rock and roll musicians into the country idiom. The show begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are now available at the Arena box-office.

Russian ballet school on film

Voted one of the most delightful dance films of recent years, The Children of Theatre Street is being sponsored in a single showing at McPherson Playhouse, Monday at 7 p.m. The Vancouver Island Ballet Society is presenting it as a benefit screening on behalf of the society.

The feature-length film is concerned with the historic ballet school in Leningrad where such famous dancers as Pavlova, Nijinsky, Fokine, Nureyev and Barishnikov trained. Princess Grace of Monaco is the narrator as the film follows the lives of a young boy and girl in their first year of dance and studies.

It also shows the senior students preparing for their graduation performance. This is filmed on the stage of the Kirov Theatre, formerly the Maryinsky, which was home to Pavlova and Nijinsky and many other ballet "greats".

Reserved seat tickets are on sale at $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

Gandhi re-think

MADRAS (AP) — Former prime minister Indira Gandhi has abandoned plans to contest a parliamentary byelection June 17 in southern India after she was told her candidacy might cause violent demonstrations.

Virgo poem wins periodical award

A poem by Sean Virgo, Deathwatch on Skidegate Narrows, was selected the best poem printed in a Canadian periodical in 1978, at the second annual National Magazine Awards ceremony held in Toronto recently.

Virgo is a former University of Victoria creative writing student and English professor. The poem appeared in issue 45 of UVic's Malahat Review.

The poet received the DuMaurier Awards for poetry. His work was chosen from among 1,300 entries in 16 award categories by 75 English and French-speaking judges from across the country. Other competitors in the category included Margaret Atwood, George Faludy and Brian Fawcett.

Virgo now lives in Topsail, Newfoundland.

Music festival spreads wealth

audrey johnson

Seen in perspective by someone who has lived in this city for a lifetime, Victoria's mushroom growth in the last decade, and particularly in the last half of the decade, is spectacular.

That is not to speak in terms of population or industrial growth, but strictly as to the city's development as a top quality cultural, arts and entertainment centre in the Canadian west. Through the several preceding decades observant people — residents and visitors — have been saying it: Victoria, because of its geographic situation that adds enormous shipping costs to goods manufactured here, will never be a major industrial site (thank God!) nor, again because of its isolation from the mainland, a corporate centre.

Nevertheless, some kinds of industry it must have, and none is cleaner, more suited to this natural environment and, when properly managed, more productive than the arts.

Undoubtedly there are readers who would debate that statement, but there is ample proof available, set down in black and white, that would shake even the most hardened skeptic. Practically any centre, large or small, where one or more aspects of the arts have taken root can supply audited figures that will confirm the overall community financial benefits beyond debate.

Pianist Ruth Laredo . . . first appearance

Bringing the argument home, let me supply a fact: The Victoria International Festival and its parent, the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts (which now has no relation to Shawnigan, by the way) this summer will spend some $300,000 in this communiy, mostly in lodging, commissariat requirements, hall and other rentals.

However, the ripple effect of $300,000 means, according to an expert in the matter, that the actual return to the community can be estimated in the millions.

I wish I could believe that certain aldermen and councils that still retain the out-of-date belief that the arts are superfluous and any money given to them is money thrown away, would read the next paragraphs.

In a study made for the Canadian Conference of the Arts by Robert Bailey, the true situation is made indisputably clear. Bailey is head of Bailey Consulting Associates of Toronto and has completed more than 50 projects in planning, research and management in arts administration throughout Canada and abroad.

So if it's solid, proven facts and figures that are wanted, here they are. Aside from reference to the Stratford Festival, which shows that for every dollar spent on a theatre ticket almost seven dollars are spent on such essentials as transportation, food and accommodation, and that the total amount spent by visitors to the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake was almost $1.2 million, there is a significant report on the American city of Baltimore.

Economists there conducted a study of eight local arts institutions and their impact. "Using 30 equations and over 80 variables they investigated audience and staff expenditures, the value of local goods and services purchased by the organizations, and even the negative impacts such as taxes forgiven by the city," says the report.

Here are the results: total expenditures of the eight organizations were $9.4 million, of which the city contributed $1.6 million. The $1.6 million spent by the city also attracted $350,000 from state and federal governments. How many ways can money be invested to bring returns of that magnitude?

In Canada, municipal government funds for the arts are almost invariably multiplied through additional federal or provincial funding. A study of funding of major arts organizations in Vancouver commissioned for presentation to the Vancouver Board of Trade in 1977 indicates that every dollar the municipality puts into the arts attracts approximately six dollars from the two senior levels of government. Without these professional arts organizations in Vancouver, it is estimated that between $18 and $25 million dollars would be lost to that city's economy!

And now back to the expanding arts and entertainment scene in our own city. The steadily developing International Festival, as well as the Victoria Symphony, the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Bastion Theatre, the Belfry Theatre and other professional organizations, all attract provincial and federal funds that are largely circulated in this city.

As for the International Festival, there is every indication that this most prestigious of all the multiple events to take place in Victoria this summer is on the verge of becoming a genuine annual bonanza.

This year's has already topped last summer's in the flood of enquiries concerning it. It also appears it will top last year's in the quality and distinction of the artists participating, new and unique features, and interest of works to be performed.

Participation by the Symphony Society with its 34-piece Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra has been made possible through a $30,000 grant authorized by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis out of lottery funds. This is an important plus for the Festival. The orchestra will participate in the special five-concert "Concerti Extravaganza" series and will provide a 23-piece accompanying orchestra for the two short operas that will conclude the festival. In addition it will give four pairs of free outdoor concerts during the six-week festival period.

Many favorites from past International Festivals, such as Gary Karr, Robin McCabe, the Philadelphia String Quartet, Robert Aitken and the Mazurkevitch violin duo are returning, but there will also be some new personalities in the supernova class.

Prominent among these is one of North America's most meteoric and celebrated international pianists, Ruth Laredo, who has achieved distinction on three continents with her concerto and recital performances and many recordings.

She has appeared as soloist with all the major U.S. orchestras and her recital tours have had clamorous receptions both from audiences and the press. Her recording of works by Ravel has won Best of the Year accolades from Stero Review and Saturday Review magazines. She will be performing the Rachmaninoff Rhapsody on a Theme by Paganini at the second Concerti Exgtravaganza concert on July 23.

The superb Trio Rouvier-Kantorow-Muller from France is coming for the first time and will be heard on several occasions. The dazzling young violinist, Daniel Heifetz, and America's most brilliant oboe soloist, Bert Lucarelli, are others who will be new to the International Festival this year.

For the next two or three weeks, this column will continue to analyse in some detail the truly sumptuous and varied banquet of entertainment that will be spread before residents and visitors in this summer of 1979.

Bastion 'scoop'

A "scoop" for Bastion Theatre has been scored by general manager Eric Macdonald, who seems to be getting the habit. It was the same thing last year for Macdonald when he pried Same Time Next Year out of the agent's clutches.

Usually it is next to impossible to obtain the rights to a play that is a running hit on Broadway. Deathtrap, by Ira Levin, rates as a must-see for visitors to New York and in the usual course of events it would probably not become available to such regional theatres as Bastion for a year or more.

Deathtrap has been playing now for 18 months and it would have to have closed and finished major tours at least, before performance rights could be applied for.

Macdonald, however, by means of persistent phone calls and letters accompanied by maps showing Victoria as quite separated geographically from the rest of North America, and by skipping over other heads to reach the playwright's agent, achieved a breakthrough.

As a result, Deathtrap will be a part of Bastion's 1979-80 season at the McPherson Playhouse. The play, a suspense piece, garnered a 1978 Tony nomination.

Bastion artistic director Edwin Stephenson now is touring Toronto, New York and London to complete casting for the upcoming season.

Belfry gears up for next season

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The many theatre-going Victorians who were delighted and a little dazzled by the quality of productions they saw at The Belfry during the season just concluded are in for a treat in 1979-80.

It has just announced an exciting new season that will be built around four Belfry productions and four attention-grabbing visiting events.

To add to the enthusiasm and optimism of the staff, Canada Council has just announced a grant of $8,500 for the new season; not a large grant but encouraging after the complete turndown the theatre received from the Council last year.

For its own four presentations artistic director Don Shipley is looking at some new, provocative and top-rated theatre works as well as a characteristically nostalgic piece and a North American classic.

The smart-looking two-color brochure suggests Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night, the elegant and musically alluring Side By Side By Sondheim, and a new musical revue based on the life and music of legendary entertainer Al Jolson, among the several choices under consideration.

Harold Pinter's Old Times, a humorous and highly literate play, the newer and strikingly successful Da, by Irish playwright Hugh Leonard, and the poignant Ashes, by David Rudkin, are on the list, as well as the Vernon Rice Drama Desk Award winner, The Sea Horse, which Shipley describes as "a small gem" combining tenderness with moments of ribaldry and suspense.

Also seriously contemplated for inclusion is an original musical by Don Shipley entitled Traces, based on the translated works of Quebec's leading poet and chansonnier, Gilles Vigneault.

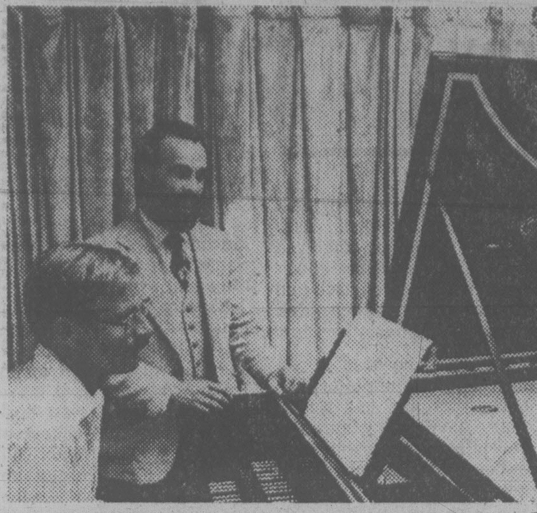
With everything looking so appetizing, it makes one wish the banquet could offer all eight dishes.

Special events already booked into The Belfry are Codco, the Newfoundland troupe that has made laugh headlines everywhere, a return engagement of Canada's finest mime company, Theatre Beyond Words, The Wonderful World of Sarah Binks, and a children's classic film series.

To ensure the success of this highly promising season, Belfry has launched its first-ever subscription campaign which is to run throughout the summer. The many people who had difficulty getting tickets for the several hit shows last season or were among the great number who never did make it to such outstanding theatre fare as Joe Egg and Piaf, probably will not hesitate to grab this opportunity of being assured seats for the '79-'80 season.

Subscription prices are highly reasonable at $22 for adults and $18 for senior citizens and students with a 10 to 20 per cent discount on all special shows. Also, all those ordering their season tickets before June 30 will get a further discount of 10 per cent. Look around and you'll probably find a Belfry subscription booth in any mall or other public centre you normally frequent.

Belfry's staff, now deeply involved in preparation for the forthcoming season, has greeted the news that the theatre has received a Young Canada Works Grant with delight. The grant means Belfry has been able to hire three students to work on the summer-long subscription campaign.



SPRING FESTIVAL of the music of J.S. Bach will be featured June 9 at 2:30 p.m.at St.John's Anglican Church and 8 p.m.at McPherson Playhouse. Among soloists for the Bach Society of Greater Victoria event are, above, harpsichordist Erich Schwandt, oboist William Benjamin, and flutist Lanny Pollet. The chamber orchestra will be conducted by George Corwin with Susan Eddlemon as concert mistress.

Lost in the desert

Shame on Peter Fonda and the producers of Wanda Nevada for exploiting the adolescent charms of barely teenage Brooke Shields, cast as the Lolita-like tease in this pointless movie. Fonda directed and he and Shields star as a mismatched pair of amoral con-artists looking for a lost Arizona gold mine and carrying on a superficial and badly acted love-hate relationship.

A movie review by Lorraine Locherty

Shields, with her voluptuous woman's face and unformed body, was perfectly cast as the child-prostitute in Louis Malle's Pretty Baby, but her role in this movie is nothing more than a lewd Marilyn Monroe caricature. She is now beyond innocence. Skinny hips swiveling, red streaked mouth pouting, she promises with knowing eyes but coyly refuses to deliver. In this movie she is in the process of becoming the worst kind of woman — one who learns early to manipulate and taunt men with her sexuality. It's sad to watch this happening to a potentially talented young actress and Fonda should be ashamed of his participation in this travesty.

The romantic link between Fonda and the 13 year-old Shields is mercifully low-key, but prurient interest is stimulated by the vague promise of spicey scenes that never materialize. Fonda limits his advances to glances of wistful longing which turn to outright lust after they've been in the desert awhile.

The movie has no direction or substance. Fonda mixes elements of comedy, terror, adventure and fantasy and the result is like a team of Walt Disney and Roman Polanski. The time is supposed to be the '50's but the dark, dusty photography creates a depression mood. Two protagonists wander around the Grand Canyon looking for a lost gold mine while being chased by a couple of bad guys and an Indian ghost, alternately having fun and getting scared out of their wits. The villains, a couple of Second World War veterans turned nasty crooks, are Damon Runyon-type characters with a penchant for killing people. As if that isn't enough, the ghost protecting the canyon plucks lightning bolts out of the sky, shoots people in the back with burning arrows and ties them to stakes.

All this might be tolerable if not for the atrocities committed in the name of acting. Fonda was better when he made his movie debut in Tammy and the Doctor in 1963. His wooden face and stilted delivery may be caused by embarrassment at the ridiculous dialogue or a genuine lack of talent, it's hard to tell. At any rate, it's almost unbearable when matched up with Shields' simpering. Henry Fonda is barely recognizable in a cameo as wild-eyed, scrawny old prospector who comes out of the canyon looking like the spectre of Howard Hughes. Disguised behind a tobacco stained white beard and a pair of goggles, he says his lines and splits in a hurry.

Ceramic sculptor back 'by the sea' for show

By LON WOOD

COURTENAY — Growing up on Victoria's Dallas Road waterfront left a firm impression on Renee Poisson.

"The sea was my companion every day — going out in boats, building rafts, I was going to be a marine biologist for a while.

"Then I wanted some answers — I thought philosophy would be it. Bright profs, small classes . . . but after a while I'd already got involved with clay."

Renee still finds it hard being away from the sea, but the momentum of her career as a ceramic sculptor seems to more than compensate.

The rushing water she now hears as she works in her tiny skylit studio is from the snow-fed Tsolum River — trickling down out of the Beaufort Mountain Range past her home at Merville, 12 km north of Courtenay.

"Maybe it's my ancestral homeland in France — Normandy," she said. "It is on the sea."

After travel on the Atlantic seashores of Europe, on the Mediterranean and South Pacific oceans, Renee came back to British Columbia to live at Long Beach.

"I got there — and that was home," she said.

On the rugged West Coast of the Island, Renee set up a primitive workshop and a wood-fired kiln. Between wave watching she dug for clay and gathered firewood for the kiln.

"It took days of chopping, splitting, stacking and waiting for the wood to dry — but I was hung up on the sea and the place so I had to do it there."

Now Renee is moving an assortment of 45 of her larger and smaller earthenware pieces to Victoria for a public exhibition at Oak Bay's Backroom Gallery, 2070 Oak Bay Avenue.

The showing runs Tuesday, June 5, to Saturday, June 23, and is titled A Confusion of Human Landforms. It will be shared with a presentation of drawings by artist Jennifer Green.

Poisson, who has studied ceramics in California and Pennsylvania as well as exhibiting and holding workshops in several widespread B.C. centres, is currently producing bisque-fired clay sculpture rubbed with finely-ground pigment and linseed oil.

The technique evolved from one she began four years ago — burnishing damp clay pieces with polished stone and then pit firing or sawdust firing.

"The finish is really silky and skin-like," she said. "Silky black to gray, silver and buff — but I felt limited by the narrow color range. I didn't want to move from burnishing back to glazes just for the colors — I don't care much for glazes, although I do use them for raku."

When a painter friend suggested she not limit her finishes to glazes and the range of colors they offer, Renee countered all her previous training to experiment. "It took months to gain control — how to apply the colors and combine them," she said. "It's getting to be like painting and sculpting, yet while color is becoming very important, form is still my key consideration."

Her own works she describes as "pleasing to disturbing" in their shape. She said most of the finishes she creates are smooth — almost leather-like in sheen. Lately, however, she has been experimenting in roughness.

By sinking pigment into clay with varying porosity, using oil and wax, colors of varied depth turn out. Leaving some pieces unburnished also produces a deeper color.

"I'm sure it's not original but it is a much less traditional way to approach the medium," she said.

'Musical partners'

A rather unusual and potentially charming assembly of instruments is to be featured tonight in a concert in the recital hall of University of Victoria's Music Building.

Trombone, flute, cello, viola and piano will be presented in various combinations. Tom Eadie, principal trombone of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, will perform a baroque sonata by Galliard, partnered at the piano by Anthony Booker. Eadie's wife, Barbara, one of this city's well known flutists, will also be accompanied at the piano by Booker in Hungarian Fantasy by Doppler.

Eadie's trombone finds infrequent partners in the cello of Linda Hougland-Daniels and viola of Jaroslav Karlovsky; the piece is Serenade No.6 by American composer Vincent Persichetti.

In addition the program will feature the Symphony's trombone section in some ensemble work led by Eadie. Starting time for the concert is 8 p.m.

Musical Notebook

'Koto' in concert

Rating as the most unusual musical event of the week is the visit of the Koto Players of Osaka, a group of Japanese consisting of two masters of the Ikuta-ryu (school) and their students, inheritors of the ancient art of performing on the silk-stringed koto.

The group will present a single concert at McPherson Playhouse Friday, at 8 p.m.

The koto originated in China and was first introduced into Japan about 1,300 years ago to provide a form of court music for the Japanese nobility. The art of playing koto was handed down from generation to generation by senior koto masters who taught their students without any written scores. In the early 20th century koto music began to be influenced by the coming of occidental music to Japan.

The greatest modern master of koto, Michio Miyagi, successfullly arranged koto music in harmony, thereby greatly widening the koto repertoire.

The silk strings are set on top of resonant lower boxes of wood. A standard koto has 13 strings but there are also 17-string kotos for bass arrangements. The koto measures approximately six feet in length.

Leading off a busy schedule of recitals and concerts at the Victoria Conservatory of Music for the next four weeks is a Sunday "special". It takes place at 2:30 p.m. and is tagged, "The Cellists of the Conservatory."

The program will consist of duos, trios, quartets and quintets under the direction of James Hunter. Special guest soloist is former Conservatory student Gary Russell, among whose most recent successes are the winning of the Cincinnati Concerto Competition and becoming a finalist in the International Steppingstones Competition.

Also on Sunday, at 7:30 p.m., the long-awaited recital by tenor Richard Margison will take place. Winner of the vocal Open Performance class in the recent Victoria Music Festival and chosen to represent the city in the provincial finals competition, Margison, a popular and busy artist, will be assisted at the piano by Kristine Beny.

Wednesday there will be an evening recital by cellist Marlene Tureski and pianist Kathleen Solose, and Thursday, also at 8 p.m., the head of the vocal department, Catherine Young, with faculty member Adele Lewis will give a song recital assisted by Gordana Lazarevitch at the piano.

The advanced student recital Friday will feature violinist Paul Culbertson with pianist Nancy Noden, and Saturday's faculty event presents outstanding saxophone artist Lynne Greenwood with pianist Arne Sahlen.

All events take place at Craigdarroch Castle, 1050 Joan Crescent.

Fifty members of the Golden Fiddle Orchestra will visit Victoria Monday to perform traditional Scottish music at the Royal Theatre. They are being presented on tour by the Glasgow Caledonian Strathspey and Reel Society.

The group includes four accordionists, soprano and tenor soloists and a vocal ensemble, the Tall Tones, all under the direction of James Moir.

Home sought for cranes

HONG KONG (AP) — The government is trying to find homes for 14 rare white naped cranes which were recently seized from a game trader who did not have a permit for them.

The agriculture and fisheries department said the birds, an endangered species, will be offered to breeding establishments in Britain, Germany and the U.S.in an effort to increase its number.

Bribes swell human flood

By JAY MATHEWS

HONG KONG (WP) — Emigrants arriving here report that increasing bribery of local officials in China has added to a flood of arrivals from China and Vietnam, threatening to engulf all remaining space in this tiny British territory.

Since Jan. 1, at least 80,000 emigrants and refugees have crossed the border from China and about 37,000 have arrived in boats from Vietnam. Both figures are unprecedented in the last three decades and the numbers of boat-borne refugees here have swelled to 10 times what they were six months ago.

If the flood of humanity still crammed into rusty boats in the harbor, continues increasing at this rate, it could total as many as 400,000 by year's end — nearly 10 per cent of Hong Kong's population.

Authorities have appealed to dozens of governments for help, but the only substantial outflow so far is to the United States. Hong Kong Governor Sir Murray MacLehose appealed to Chinese authorities during a visit to Peking in March. But there seems to be no substantial decline in the 10,000 Chinese residents arriving here each month with legal exit permits from China.

Emigrants confirm a report by the Chinese-language newspaper Ming Pao of an unexpected increase in bribery under China's new, relaxed local administrative procedures. "Serious corruption exists in the practice of commune cadres in many places, and once they are bribed they would indiscriminately issue permits," Ming Pao said. Hong Kong authorities, dependent on good relations with Peking, have continued to accept all emigrants with valid exit permits. Hong Kong police have turned back another 31,000 illegal refugees this year, but at least that many more are estimated to have slipped over the border undetected.

Communist sources here report that the Peking government plans to cut down on corruption by requiring that all exit permits be approved in Peking, rather than at the local level. Such an order is expected to create panic among many people wishing to leave China, however, and perhaps swell the numbers arriving here illegally.

Britan, which runs this territory, agreed this week to take in 982 people rescued off floundering boats from Vietnam by a British freighter, Sibonga. But the new Conservative government in London has made no promise of acceptance of more boat people on a regular basis.

Almost all the refugees arriving here, both from both China and Vietnam, are ethnic Chinese. Only 20 per cent of the boat people are ethnic Vietnamese. The Vietnamese government has continued to pursue its policy of discrimination against its citizens of Chinese origin, particularly since the brief Chinese armed invasion of the northern Vietnamese border area. Chinese residents have been organized to leave in boats by Vietnamese officials who collect fees of $1,000 to $2,000 a person. The boat people say they have been threatened with transfers to concentration camps if they do not leave.

More than 200,000 ethnic Chinese have crossed the border from Vietnam into China, where many have been crammed onto state farms. Some of these border crossers have now been detected entering Hong Kong over land, though authorities here say they do not know the extent of their numbers. Chinese coastal authorities have helped many boat-borne refugees from Vietnam rest and repair their boats, on the condition that they continue on to Hong Kong.

About 115,000 refugees from Vietnam and Cambodia were waiting placement in Southeast Asian way stations a year ago. There are now about 260,000, and these do not include the thousands estimated to have died at sea. The captain of the Sibonga, the British freighter that recently arrived here, said he made up his mind to pick up nearly 1,000 refugees after he saw a baby, dead of exposure and thirst, tossed into the waves.

'Ghost train' to bite the dust

AUCKLAND (CP) — For years, New Zealand has had the nearest thing in the world to a genuine ghost train. Now even the shadow of the ghost is to be exorcised.

More than 20 years ago a decision was made to build a railway in the South Island between the cities of Blenheim and Nelson — a distance of 110 kilometres. Land was bought and surveys were made.

But the railway became a political issue. One party favored it, another decided against building it.

Finally the whole idea of the line was abandoned but by way of compensating the people of Nelson, who argued that they had been promised the rail link, the government of the day introduced what it called a "national railway."

The notion was that goods would be carried to and from Nelson by road transportation but under the same conditions as if a railway existed, and at the cheaper railway rates. Substantial government subsidies have made up the difference to road carriers.

The government's contention was that the railway, even with payment of annual subsidies, was cheaper than a capital expenditure on a rail line that never would have paid for itself.

But lately the railways have been in serious financial trouble and the current National party government has been looking for ways to reduce deficits. As a result, it has been decided that the national railway is no longer justified.

Subsidies of about $2 million a year to carriers will cease and persons sending freight to Nelson will have to pay normal prices.

Bitter protests are anticipated from the district.

Yet many other districts have long asked why Nelson should enjoy the subsidy while they do not have it.

HOUSEKEEPER-NANNIE WANTED

This postion calls for a mature well-trained person (in the 30-to-50 age bracket) to take care of a large house in North Delta and to care for a four-year-old boy. The type of person who will fill this position will be an efficient housekeeper, may have a fundemental religous background, and be willing and able to import old fashioned values to the boy. The purpose of creating this position is to provide a warm secure home for the boy and at the same time equip him with the basic values he will need to fill an important business function in his later years.

The father of the child is an important businessman with substantial interests in Canada and Europe and his business calls for frequent travel away from the North Delta home. His business interests include substantial real estate investments and developments and he is the publisher of the North Delta Sentinel newspaper.

Excellent references are required and a resume must be supplied by the applicant. In addition, the successful applicant must be prepared to agree to an interim period for evaluation purposes.

The position provides excellent remuneration and the successful applicant will be furnished with separate living quarters. A child or children will not be considered a hindrance. On occasions the care of the child and the ongoing operation of the house will be the responsibility of the person hired.

Communication regarding this position should be made to Mrs. Dorothy Parker at North Delta Sentinel, 9325-120 St., Delta, B.C. V4C 6R8.

COWICHAN VALLEY REGIONAL DISTRICT SENIOR THEATRE TECHNICIAN FOR THE COWICHAN COMMUNITY CENTRE

The successful applicant will be responsible to implement and control the technical operation of the Cowichan Theatre.

Responsibilities include the technical operation of the Cowichan Theatre, assist performing groups in stage, sound and light settings, assist local performing groups and students in the training and the use of theatre equipment.

Operate and maintain theatre lighting, sound and associated electrical and mechanical support equipment.

Desirable qualifications and training; a University Degree in Fine Arts majoring in Theatre, a Diploma from a Community College or a related specialty. Previous related theatrical stagecraft experience and natural mechanical ability would be definite assets.

Salary will be commensurated with the qualifications and experience of the successful applicant.

Written applications including a detailed resume will be accepted up to Friday, June 15, at 4:30 p.m.

To: Mr. C. M. Gianna,
Cowichan Community Centre,
2687 James Street,
Duncan, B.C. V9L 2X5

Heavy are our hearts today,
Memory brings you back once more,
To the time when you were with us,
To the happy days of yore.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

THE GRATITUDE IN OUR hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives and neighbours to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Thomas France.
Jean France and family.

LANA PERRY WISHES TO thank her any friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral arrangements. Special thanks to Archdeacon Jones for his consoling words during my late bereavement.

MR. EINO MYNTTINEN AND sons wish to thank our family and friends for sympathy and help in our loss of beloved wife and mother, Elizabeth Mynttinen.

309 IN MEMORIAM

CASANAVE — In loving memory of Victor Joseph.
Today is your birthday
However long our lives may last
Whatever lands we view,
Whatever joys or griefs be ours,
We shall always remember you."
—From the many family members and dear friends in the city of your birth, Victoria, B.C. and in those where you lived, Montreal and Calgary.

KOWALYK — Norman L. passed away June 2, 1978. Son, husband, father and brother. Missed very much by all of us.
"TIME CANNOT STEAL THE TREASURED MEMORIES THAT WE CARRY IN OUR HEARTS."

309 IN MEMORIAM

SIMPSON - In loving memory of Frederick Burns Simpson, who died June 2nd, 1978. Much loved husband of Charlotte and father of his dear children Robert, Linda and Freda.
So dearly loved,
So sadly missed.
- Charlotte Simpson and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine
all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

Ford to pay in Pinto death

NEW YORK (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has agreed to pay $517,000 to a Long Island couple whose daughter was killed four years ago when a rental car struck the Pinto in which she was riding.

The woman's parents will receive an additional $225,000 from Hertz Corp. and another firm involved with the rented car.

Judith Bird, 23, of Wantagh, N.Y., a secretary at a Chase Manhattan Bank office in East Meadow, was a passenger in a Ford Pinto that was stopped behind a stalled van when the rear of the Pinto was rammed by the rented auto.

After the impact, the Pinto burst into flames, and Miss Bird was trapped.

FOOTBALL TRADE

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League have acquired linebacker Ron Southwick from Winnipeg Blue Bombers for future considerations.

'Vicious' chain letter upsets elderly

An elderly Victoria woman said today a vicious chain-letter is being sent to pensioners.

Mrs. Clara Jensen of the Gorge View United Church senior citizen home on Chown Place said while the chain letter does not ask for money, it threatens the receiver with bad luck if it's thrown away and copies not sent on to 20 people.

"It even suggests death may follow if the letter is discarded," she said.

Jensen said the letter capitalizes on the superstitions of elderly people.

"I'm not superstitious" she said. "But many people are. This letter is bound to increase stress and anxiety."

She said she contacted city police who told her chain-letters are illegal but extremely difficult to trace. She was referred to the post office.

She said a postal official was not helpful.

Harry Bond, a director of the society that runs the home, said the letter was cruel.

"This is the sort of thing which can affect the health of elderly people who are inclined to be superstitious," he said.

The letter starts with the quotation: "Trust in the Lord with all good faith and He will acknowledge and He will Light the Way."

It goes on to say: "This prayer has been sent to you for good luck. The original copy is from the Netherlands. The luck has now been brought to you. You will receive good luck within four days of receiving this letter provided you in turn send it back out. This is no joke."

It says the receiver must send the letter on within 96 hours.

The letter cites a number of examples of the bad luck that followed people who broke the chain.

"General Welch lost his wife six days after he received the letter. He failed to circulate the prayer. However, before his death he received $775,000.

"Carlo Deditt, an office employee, received the chain, he forgot it and a few days later, he lost his job. He found the chain letter and sent it to 20 people. Five days later he got an even better job. Fairchild received the chain and not believing in it, threw it away. Nine days later he died. For no reason whatsoever should this chain be broken."

Deputy sheriff snuffs prisoner's box escape

Freedom was fleetingly brief Friday for a 20-year-old man who made a run for it in Victoria provincial court.

Keith Edward Mack, 1100 Burnside West, was brought into court at 11:42 a.m. and — as duty legal aid lawyer John Hills was speaking on Mack's behalf to Judge Fred Green — suddenly bolted out of the prisoner's box with three deputy sheriffs in hot pursuit.

Deputy sheriff William Skrypnick nabbed Mack just outside the Law Courts building's northwest entrance in front of startled passers-by.

Mack was placed over the hood of a parked car and handcuffed for return to the cell area.

Court resumed after a delay of about two minutes and the charges on which Mack was appearing were read to him. He is charged with breaking and entering an apartment at 795 Fairview on Wednesday and with escaping from the Esquimalt police station the same day.

He was remanded in custody until Monday so he can contact his lawyer.

No extension seen for BCRIC shares

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Friday an extension of the June 15 deadline for applications of the five free resources shares is highly unlikely.

Applications for the shares in the B.C. Resources Development Corp. are running below expectations with only two weeks to go.

About one million British Columbians have applied. That figure covers about 1.25 million citizens as parents apply for their children.

But the figure is only about half the eligible number of residents who qualify.

A last-minute advertising campaign is showing some results and both Wolfe and BCRIC president David Helliwell expect a late rush.

Based on that, Wolfe said an extension of the deadline is unlikely.

Helliwell said there is provision in the act for the corporation board of directors and government to extend the deadline.

About six million of the available 12 million shares had been applied for by Friday. An extra three million had been purchased at $6 each, generating an additional $18 million in revenue.

Helliwell said the board anticipated between 65 and 85 per cent of the free shares would be applied for. With the last-minute rush, it seems likely at least the 65 per cent figure will be reached, he said.

The shares will be distributed on B.C. Day, Aug. 6, and after that, any Canadian citizen can purchase shares on the open market.

Victoria residents SFU grads

A number of Greater Victoria residents are among the Simon Fraser University graduates receiving degrees today during the convocation ceremony at Queen Elizabeth Theatre.

About 1,200 degrees were granted this year, bringing the total number of SFU graduates to more than 10,500 since the university opened in 1965.

Victoria area graduates in the bachelor of arts program are: Helena Brooks, 588 Ridgewood; William Carere, 4947 Old West Saanich; Doreen Chan, 510 Raynor; Robert Godbout, 1124 Fairfield; Garth Greskiw, 3050 Carola; Rein Lepnurm, 105-532 Dallas; Laurie L. McNeil, Jordan River; Emelia Neveaux, 2779 Penelope; and David Wills, 301-713 Cairn.

David Stapells, 2671 Crestview, will receive a bachelor or arts honors degree.

Bachelor of science degrees will be awarded to: Joan Morgan, 7651 Sigmar, Saanichton and Gavin W. Smart of 222 Brian.

Murray Wilton, 767 Victoria, will receive a doctor of philosophy degree.

Master of arts degrees will be awarded to Allan Fitzgibbon, 1216 Rudlin, and Pamela Montgomery, 2-1620 Belmont.

Robert Lucy, 16 King George, will receive his masters in pest management.

Fibreglass seen as milfoil foil

PENTICTON (CP) — Jay Lewis, information director of the South Okanagan Environmental Coalition says the City of Seattle has successfully tested a non-chemical method of controlling Eurasian milfoil.

Lewis said a vinyl-coated fibreglass material called Aquascreen was effective against the weed which has been choking Okanagan Lakes in small-scale applications such as marinas.

"The material is laid down over the plant beds, giving immediate relief from interference with boating activities," Lewis said. "Light restriction and physical interference with the plant may result in as high as 82 per cent reduction of the plant mass."

Lewis said Aquascreen can be recycled and could treat at least two sites a summer.

Big Alaska quake forecast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major earthquake is likely to occur along the Gulf of Alaska about 150 miles south of Valdez within the next few decades, according to recently gathered evidence, the U. S. Geological Survey reported today.

Although few people live along that stretch of the Alaskan coast, the survey said a quake with a magnitude of 8 or more on the Richter scale "could produce potentially damaging ground motion over an area as large as 30,000 square miles."

Dr. H. William Menard, director of the USGS, said the survey's concern has been expressed to state officials in Alaska and other federal officials.

"The general potential for large earthquakes in southern Alaska has been well known," Menard said, "but recent events and studies increasingly suggest that the area surrounding Cape Yakataga is an especially likely site for a large earthquake and therefore deserves intensified attention."

Menard said such an earthquake could occur anytime "and is likely within the next two to four decades."

The area is called a "seismic gap" because it is an area along a major fault where significant movement and resulting earthquakes have not occurred during recent years. This indicates significant strain has accumulated in the area.

The earthquake potential there was first identified by scientists from Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory. A report by Lamont geologists was scheduled to be presented today to the American Geophysical Union.

"During the last few months, more and more evidence has accumulated that one or more large earthquakes are probable within the gap," said Dr. Robert Wesson, chief of earthquake studies for the geological survey.

He said scientists believe the large St. Elias earthquake that occurred Feb. 28 on the eastern edge of the gap "indicates the high level of unrelieved strain in the region."

Genocide Bid Sudan Charges

KHARTOUM, Sudan (UPI) — Ugandan refugees arriving in southern Sudan have accused joint Tanzanian-Ugandan forces of massacring Moslem Arabs and Sudanese nationals in a "genocide campaign" in the last two weeks, the Sudan news agency said today.

"The Tanzanian forces have launched a genocide campaign to exterminate Moslems in Uganda," the agency said in a dispatch from Juba, capital of Sudan's southern region. It quoted unnamed Ugandan refugees who have fled to Sudan.

President Jaafar Numeiry recently said about 100,000 Ugandans have arrived in southern Sudan as a result of fighting in which Tanzanian and Uganda rebel troops defeated and overthrew the regime of former President Idi Amin.

The Tanzanian-led forces have been carrying out mopping-up operations in recent weeks in northern Uganda where the remnants of Amin's forces made their last stand before total collapse.

"The Tanzanian forces started a wide-ranging campaign two weeks ago in all towns and villages under their control, looking for circumcised men (sign of Islamic faith) to kill them on the spot," the agency said, quoting refugees in the Nimule, Kaya and Kajokaji districts in southern Sudan.

It said an old woman, whom it did not name, told the agency the joint Tanzanian-Ugandan forces "raped old Moslem women in front of members of their families before killing them." They also "slashed the stomachs of pregnant women and killed children," she said.

The agency said the refugees also spoke of Moslems being killed inside mosques and their bodies dismembered.

It said the refugees have appealed to Sudan, current chairman of the Organization of African Unity, as well as Moslem countries and the United Nations to intervene in order to put an end to the atrocities.

Vietnam to allow thousands to go

BANGKOK (UPI) — Vietnam agreed today to allow thousands of citizens to leave the country legally, in hopes of slowing a record flow of refugees.

Diplomatic sources said about 20,000 Vietnamese may be allowed to leave their country soon under the seven-point plan, 5,000 to the United States alone.

The sources, however, doubted the Vietnam-United Nations agreement would halt the exit of "boat people," currently leaving Vietnam.

Vietnam News agency said Vietnamese officials and Deputy U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Dale De Haan agreed to cooperate on "an orderly departure of persons who wish too leave. Vietnam for countries of new residence."

Only those Vietnamese approved by Hanoi and accepted for immigration abroad would be allowed to leave.

It said "family reunion and other humanitarian cases will be carried out as soon as possible and to the maximum extent."

Ship lines in price-fix?

WASHINGTON (CP) — Seven international shipping lines that account for much of the freight carried by container ships between Europe and the United States were charged Friday with illegal price fixing.

Named as defendants are four U.S. and three European lines.

The U.S. companies are American Export Lines, Sea-Land Service, Seatrain Lines and United States Lines.

The European firms are Hapag-Lloyd Aktiengesellschaft of Hamburg, West Germany; Atlantic Container Line of Southampton, England, and Dart Containerline Company of Southampton and Antwerp, Belgium.

U.S. law permits some joint setting of rates by ocean shipping firms but only if the agreements have been sanctioned by the U.S. Federal Maritime Commission.

The alleged conspiracies are arrangements not approved by the commission, a federal grand jury charged.

PROBLEM

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

NEWEST U.S. INTERNATIONAL CHESS MASTER

John Fedorowicz, 20, is the newest International Master from the U.S. FIDE President Fridrik Olafsson awarded him the title in a special letter in March. Fedorowicz certainly earned it with his excellent 1978 results.

He is now ranked among the top 50 players in this country. He has twice tied for first place in the U.S. Junior Championship. In 1977, he was declared U.S. Junior Champion on tie-breaks, while in 1978 tie-breaks placed him third. Generally, ties are not broken with playoff games, but rather with one of various systems that evaluate the strength of each player's adversaries. The top honors go to the player who faced the stronger opposition.

THE MONTREAL LANDMARK

The first prize in the month-long Montreal International at the Quebec Pavillion of the Man and His Word was $25,000 — the highest-ever chess prize for an international tournament. In fact, the total prize fund for this contest, which ended earlier this month, was $110,000 and was donated by the Province of Quebec, La Presse (Montreal's largest French newspaper), Air Canada, and a number of other Canadian organizations not previously interested in chess.

In prize money and standing of players, only a handful of other tournaments in chess history bear comparison. In the standing category, two in 1938, the great AVRO tournament in Holland and the Nottingham in England come to mind, but they were over 40 years ago.

In recent years, FIDE (the world chess federation) has ranked tournaments by categories based on the average rating of the event. The highest level up until Montreal, has been Category 14. Both the Bogojno, Yugoslavia, and the Tilburg, Holland, events last year reached that level. But in the Montreal tournament, the average rating was 2622 — the Category 15!

Ten of the world's top 20 players competed, including former World Champions Mikhael Tal and Boris Spassky, as well as the present champion, Anatoly Karpov, all three Russians.

Karpov led in the first half of this double round, round-robin event. At that point, Tal and Lajos Portisch of Hungary were second, each having 6. But then Tal went ahead, leading Karpov by half-a-point. That didn't last. Determined play by Karpov pulled him up even with his compatriot, and both tied for first and second place with 12 points each. Tal certainly showed he was still a major force in international chess. His play was both bold and dangerous. Portisch was third, with 10½ points and took home $13,000. Next came Lubomir Ljubojevic of Yugoslavia with 9; Jan Timman, Holland, and Boris Spassky, U.S.S.R., 8½; Dr. Robert Hubner, Germany, Vlastimil Hort, Czechoslovakia, and Lubomir Kavalek, U.S., 8.

LOSER BEATS WINNER

Bent Larsen of Denmark, with 5½ points, was the only player to beat World Champion Anatoly Karpov in the Montreal International, May, 1979. Here's a game from that event.

Gasohol, alcohol are latest gas tank tigers

By MARSHALL SCHUON

NEW YORK (NYT) — With gas lines in California and spot shortages and ever-higher prices at pumps across the country, the gasoline shortage is generating some energy of its own — primarily in new research on gasohol, alcohol and other alternative fuels for the nation's 100 million automobiles.

"The thing is, the urgency wasn't there before," said a Chrysler Corporation engineer who asked anonymity. "Now everybody's paying attention, and reams of reports are coming in from all over the world."

What those reports show is that gasohol and straight alcohol are feasible substitutes for gasoline with a great many technical advantages — as well as a great many drawbacks that are not only technical but economic.

Gasohol blends 10 per cent ethyl alcohol with 90 per cent unleaded gasoline. It offers some advantages over gasoline, the experts agree, particularly as a first step in extending the energy supply.

The alcohol additive, called ethanol, also raises the gasoline's octane rating — eliminating engine knock — and lowers some types of exhaust emissions. Other performance claims, though, can be true or untrue, depending on the vehicle using the gasohol.

Since oxygen accounts for about half the weight of a molecule of alcohol, adding it to gasoline essentially reduces the amount of fuel, increases the gasoline's oxygen and thus makes the engine run leaner. On an older car, that can mean better performance and mileage. Automobiles built since 1974, however, are designed for extremely lean mixtures to reduce exhaust emissions. Therefore, they already use all the oxygen they can. And, since alcohol has less energy than gasoline on a gallon-for-gallon basis, gasohol will offer about the same, or slightly poorer, mileage in those cars.

General Motors, which with most other auto manufacturers sees a strong future for alcohol, has recommended use of pure methanol, rather than ethanol or gasohol, as the fuel of the future.

That is because methanol, commonly known as wood alcohol, can be produced from readily available sources, including garbage and agricultural waste such as manure and cornstalks. Ethanol, on the other hand, is made from corn, sugar beets and other food grains, and it is three times as expensive to produce.

To make methanol, the raw materials must be converted under high temperature to a gas composed of carbon monoxide and hydrogen. After that, it is relatively simple to pass the gas over a catalyst and form methyl alcohol.

While a gallon of ethanol has about two-thirds the energy content of the same amount of gas, methanol has only half. That means that cars designed to run on pure alcohol would require larger tanks if they were to have the same range as current models.

Both Mercedes-Benz and Volkswagen have experimented with alcohol, not only in Europe but also in Brazil, where a surplus of sugar crops has allowed the government to market the fuel. Mercedes, in fact, has demonstrated commercial vehicles with diesel engines that run on ethanol.

Volkswagen converted a fleet of cars to methanol and found that they had 12 per cent more power because methanol's high vaporization point cooled the mixture, creating greater density than gasoline would have as it entered the engine.

Mileage was both better and worse, the company said, in that the cars used more fuel — but consumed far less actual energy.

One of the major advantages of alcohol is its high octane rating, which allows engines to gain power through higher compression without anti-knock fuel additives, such as lead, that increase exhaust emissions.

For this reason, in fact, Atlantic Richfield Company has been quietly making its gasoline with 7 per cent alcohol content for a decade.

In recent years, the compression ratio in cars — the degree to which fuel is squeezed in the cylinder — has been lowered to about 8 to 1, mainly so they can use unleaded gasoline without pinging. With straight methanol, the compression ratio can be boosted to 12 to 1 and even higher, yielding more power.

In Sacramento, Charles Stone, director of California's synthetic fuels program, has been driving a Ford Pinto converted for pure methanol, and the engine's compression ratio has been raised to 14 to 1 without problems.

"Not only that," said Stone, who has become one of alcohol's chief boosters, "our tests show that this car runs about 10 times cleaner than it would on gas."

Alcohol does burn more cleanly, but as with its other facets, the pollution characteristics are mixed. In a General Motors gasohol study, for instance, hydrocarbon emissions from the methanol blend averaged a 1 per cent increase compared to gasoline. Carbon monoxide emissions decreased an average of 38 per cent and nitrogen oxide emissions were scattered from a 20 per cent increase in some cars to a 36 per cent decrease in others.

Volkswagen found that emission of aldehydes increased with straight methanol but that the problem could be reduced by raising the compression ratio and by adding a slight amount of water to the fuel. Aldehydes, the organic substances that give the exhaust of an alcohol-powered car its somewhat unpleasant odor, are not federally regulated.

With the generally lower carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide readings, alcohol's supporters believe that widespread use of the fuel could eliminate hundreds of dollars worth of pollution equipment on a car. However, buyers probably would not save any money, since use of alcohol would present problems requiring other modifications.

First, larger fuel tanks would be needed if the range of the vehicle were to be maintained. And, since alcohol tends to be corrosive, substitute materials would have to be used in the fuel system.

In cold weather, a small amount of gasoline or some other easily vaporized fuel also is necessary to get the engines started. And in summer, alcohol poses other problems, particularly vapor lock, which occurs when fuel begins to boil in the lines, creating bubbles that block the flow to the carburetor.

One new method, developed at Texas A & M, solves a number of the problems by combining separate gasoline and methanol systems.

Hard starting because of poor vaporization is taken care of by using gasoline until the engine warms up, at which point an automatic switchover takes place. The system also allows a driver to use nothing but gas when methanol is not available.

Vapor lock and the need for manifold heating are eliminated by a separate tank, heated by exhaust, that vaporizes the methanol before it gets to the carburetor.

Carter appealing wage curb setback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is asking an appeals court to restore the president's powers to punish violators of his anti-inflation wage guidelines.

In papers filed Friday, the government asked the U.S. Court of Appeals to overturn a lower-court ruling that stripped Carter of the right to use economic sanctions in enforcing his guidelines.

Government lawyers, hoping for a prompt review, asked for a hearing before the appeals court within three weeks.

The appeal was filed after U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker, who ruled against Carter in a case brought by the AFL-CIO and nine member unions, stayed until next Wednesday an order barring the president from enforcing the wage guidelines.

The judge agreed to delay the order to give the administration time to begin its appeals process.

Parker said Thursday that it is illegal for Carter to threaten to deny federal contracts to companies that violate the administration's allegedly voluntary wage or price guidelines. However, the judge did not issue a specific order forbidding the use of such penalties until Friday.

The order bars penalties against violators of the wage guideline but makes no mention of the price guideline, even though the judge concluded that it is illegal to enforce either guideline with economic penalties.

An aide to the judge said the order concerned only the wage standard because that was the only portion of the program challenged by labor.

Although the judge's decision weakens the guidelines, administration inflation fighters said they will continue to press companies and unions to comply.

"We look at the standards as living, if not well, and we will continue to insist on compliance," said one aide, who asked not to be named.

Parker ruled that the threatened denial of contracts worth $5 million or more to program violators is a severe penalty that creates mandatory controls, which Carter may not impose without congressional approval. Current law bars the use of mandatory controls.

The AFL-CIO argued in its suit that the program is unfair to workers because employers are obeying the wage standard while ignoring the price standard.

The wage standard limits annual pay and benefit increases to seven per cent a year, while the price standard calls for smaller price increases this year than the average increase in the prior two years.

Tibet still fighting against China rule

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Armed resistance by underground group to Chinese rule is continuing in Tibet, a Tivetan who recently arrived in India told a news conference Friday. The man, Tsetan Tashi, said he had been recently released after spending 13 years in a Chinese prison. He estimated Chinese military strength in Tibet at 600,000 men.

Warsaw millions cheer for Pope

Times News Services

WARSAW — Pope John Paul II, who left his native Poland seven months ago as a cardinal, returned "as a pilgrim" and Pope today and rode a wave of emotion and tumult into Warsaw, capital of a nation both Communist and Catholic.

"I come as a pilgrim," the first Polish Pope said, to a country "to which I remain deeply attached by the roots of my life, of my heart."

Perhaps three million Poles — an accurate estimate was impossible — crushed together along the pontiff's seven-mile route into the city.

As the Pope passed, almost the entire crowd fell to its knees.

Poland sent its president to the airport to welcome the first reigning Pope ever to visit a Communist country. President Henryk Jablonski's words showed the cool but correct official attitude to this visit by a Roman Catholic pontiff.

"With open arms, Your Holiness, we welcome you to your native land," Jablonski said.

In turn, the Pope reassured the Communist rulers of his homeland that his visit had been dictated by "strictly religious motives.

"I earnestly hope that my present journey in Poland may serve the great cause of rapprochement and of co-operation among nations for reconciliation and for peace in the contemporary world," he said.

Poland officially received the Pope as a head of state — the Vatican — rather than as leader of the world's 750 million Catholics.

But the people of Poland received him as one of their own.

Singing, waving throngs — thousands of them in brilliantly colored regional costumes — begged John Paul to bless rosaries and statues of the Virgin Mary.

Overnight, the people of the capital, 93 per cent Catholic like their countrymen at large, festooned Warsaw with banners and pictures of "our own Pope." They paved the streets with flowers.

The man who seven months ago was Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow rode to Warsaw's St. Johns Cathedral on the flatbed of a Polish army truck, under a canopy of yellow and white.

He paid no attention to his gilded throne, standing most of the way and waving both hands. Inside the cathedral the crush of the people was so great that restraining ropes burst.

As the 59-year-old pontiff's specially converted Boeing 727 on its flight from Rome touched down at 1:07 a.m. Victoria time at a military airport outside Warsaw, every church bell in the city pealed out.

John Paul knelt and kissed the ground at the bottom of the Alitalia jetliner's steps, then hugged and kissed tiny four-year-old Agnieszka Jurkowska, a girl who gave him a bouquet.

At the airport, in his first speech as Pope in his home country, the pontiff told a crowd estimated at 20,000: "I thank you for not having forgotten me . . . May God reward you."

Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, Poland's Roman Catholic leader, joined President Jablonski in greeting the Pope.

The 78-year-old Wyszynski, the outspoken defender of Polish Catholics, has been ill in recent weeks and appeared pale and worn as he stood beside the Pope. When he attempted to kneel, the pontiff took hold of his shoulders and raised him to his feet.

Security was strict. Army helicopters criss-crossed overhead. The military airport bristled with police and militia.

TYPICAL TWEEDY TYPES, tea tipplers all, were tasting their leafy brew in public again this morning as the annual two-day Oak Bay Tea Party started with a colorful parade. Festivities continued in the afternoon with skateboard and skydiving demonstrations. Sunday starts with a pancake breakfast from 7 to 9 a.m. and the fun continues all day with the Ms. Oak Bay Tea Bag competition. Outhouse and bathtub races will vie with water football and beach entertainment for the attention of spectators.

Europe up in arms at U.S. oil policy

PARIS (AP) — Western industrial countries are planning an emergency meeting next week to debate the decision by the United States to use subsidies to stockpile home heating oil.

The policy has been strongly attacked by European countries as selfish and damaging to the common fight against the oil shortage.

"Carter declares oil war," said a front-page headline in Britain's Daily Mirror on Friday.

"The hallowed principle of egoism, every man for himself, is at work," charged the Paris socialist paper Le Matin.

The International Energy Agency, comprising 20 Western countries including the United States, said it will assemble its permanent delegates to question Washington on its decision a week ago to allow a temporary subsidy of $5 a barrel to U.S. importers on some oil products, notably heating oil and diesel fuel.

The U.S. energy department says the purpose is to build up U.S. supplies of heating oil and diesel fuel. The subsidy, known as an entitlement, is paid from a pool of funds financed by oil-company contributions required by the U.S. government.

Europeans see the move as an effort to help U.S. buyers compete with spiralling oil prices on the spot market in Rotterdam, Netherlands — a crucial source of oil for Europe during the present period of shortfalls.

"In the face of crisis, Uncle Sam has reacted as usual: it is applying the law of the strong," said the Paris daily Le Figaro. It accused Washington of going behind the backs of its allies in the struggle for oil and delivering "a scandalous coup de force."

British Energy Minister David Howell asked his French counterpart, Andre Giraud, to express "profound concern" to Washington officials whom Giraud will be visiting next week.

In West-Germany, The Stuttgarter Zeitung daily said Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff has sharply complained to the U.S. ambassador about the subsidies.

The paper said the move is sure to cloud Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's talks with Carter in Washington, also scheduled for next week.

The Dutch government expressed displeasure over the U.S. action, while the Danish president of the IEA, Niels Ersboell, called it tantamount "to snatching money out of our currency reserves."

Most television newscasts made the point that the U.S. consumes twice as much gasoline per capita as Europeans, at less than half the price.

The French are avowed enemies of the Rotterdam market, insisting its prices should be government-controlled and the U.S. strategy is seen here as a boost for the market.

The Rotterdam market accounts for only a few per cent of Europe's oil needs, but is valuable for covering sudden shortfalls.

In Brussels, officials of the European Common Market are reported furious at the subsidies and have issued figures in a bid to prove that the supply of oil to Europe has fallen more than twice as much as the flow to the U.S.

Big rigs roll in protest

Associated Press

Convoys of angry U.S. truckers blockaded pumps at several stations in at least two states today and said they plan to roll into Washington on Monday to protest the cost of diesel fuel.

Trucks sealed entrances to a truck stop in Southington, Conn., calling the price of fuel "outrageous and ridiculous."

The trucks rolled in to the truck stop Friday night and remained in place this morning. No violence was reported.

"It's a hoax and a farce by the oil companies," said Jack Ruppard, spokesman for the truckers. The oil companies, he said, "have oil running out of their ears."

Bob Jacks, co-owner of the truck stop, estimated there were 100 trucks blockading the station. Later, witnesses counted only about a dozen rigs actually blocking the pumps with another 50 or so in the area.

Ruppard said truckers are particularly angry that the price of diesel fuel has risen above the price of regular gasoline in some areas.

Meanwhile, 12 trucks continued a vigil near an Oklahoma City truck stop while the operator of another station agreed to a request by truckers to limit fuel sales.

The independent truckers plan to descend on the capital next week to demand deregulation of the industry and more fuel at cheaper prices.

"They (federal officials) think we're bluffing, and we're going to show them that we're not," said Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association.

Recounts bring no change

OTTAWA (CP) — Party standings in the new 282-seat House of Commons are unchanged following two judicial recounts completed Friday.

A judicial recount of votes in Vancouver Centre riding has confirmed former Vancouver mayor and Liberal candidate Art Phillips as the winner in the May 22 federal election.

Phillips edged out Progressive Conservative Pat Carney by 85 votes. He is the only Liberal elected to the Commons west of Manitoba.

The final tally conducted by county court Judge David Campbell Friday showed Phillips with 15,420 votes, followed by Carney with 15,335 votes. Ron Johnson of the New Democrats was third with 13,352 votes.

In the Toronto riding of Parkdale-High Park, a judicial recount has confirmed Liberal Jesse Flis' win over the incumbent Progressive Conservative Yuri Shymko.

Meanwhile, judicial recounts are pending in two Nova Scotia ridings, both apparently won by Conservatives: Halifax and Southwest Nova.

Neighbors haul man from burning house

A 28-year-old Langford man is alive today thanks largely to the quick actions of his neighbor and a Colwood RCMP policewoman.

Mark Peterson had collapsed from smoke while trying to extinguish a fire in the living room of his home at 2827 Leigh Road early this morning.

He was dragged to safety by neighbor Doug Guyatt and Constable Marlene Collins.

Fire Chief Al LeQuesne said special credit should go to Guyatt who entered the smoke-filled house and found Peterson lying on the floor of the living room. Guyatt had got as far as the kitchen when Collins arrived, and they dragged Peterson to safety.

Firemen applied oxygen and took Peterson to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated for smoke inhalation.

LeQuesne said Peterson had fallen asleep on a chesterfield while smoking a cigarette and awoke at about 4:45 a.m. to find the couch on fire.

He woke up his wife and child and they ran outside.

LeQuesne said the child suddenly realized the family cat and kittens were still in a basket behind the couch.

While Mrs. Peterson went to rescue the animals, Peterson grabbed a garden hose and tried to douse the flames.

N-protesters plan drop in

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Greenpeace demonstrators will parachute into a "major Canadian nuclear power plant" today and attempt to occupy the site in a protest against nuclear energy, an official of the conservation group said Friday.

The official, Rex Weyler, refused at a news conference to say where the protesters plan to land.

"I imagine they will all be arrested, but they will attempt to get inside the facility and occupy it," he said.

He said Greenpeace, which claims 100,000 members, is protesting among other things, Canada's policy of selling a certain type of nuclear reactor to other countries. The reactor produces materials that can be used for making nuclear weapons.

Earlier Friday, three men scaled a 60-metre transmission tower at the Darlington nuclear power plant under construction near Oshawa, Ont., one of a number of planned anti-nuclear demonstration across North America this weekend.

• The men, who set up a platform about halfway up the tower, say they will not come down until Ontario Premier William Davis promises an environmental assesment study of the plant's effects and a moritorium on construction until the study is completed.

In Massachusetts, about three dozen protesters are to wind up a 130-kilometre march to Plymouth from Provincetown on Sunday. The march, organized by the Massachusetts Bay Coalition, began Thursday.

Coalition spokesman Jay Critchley said the march is designed to call attention to the danger an accident at the Pilgrim I nuclear power plant might cause .

Money smugglers getting nailed

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

U.S. Customs officers in Washington State are seizing more than a million dollars in cash and securities a year from persons attempting to smuggle money into the country.

Donald Eide, district director of customs in Seattle, told the Times Friday the illegal movement of currency across the border has become a major problem.

Under the U.S. Currency Act passed by Congress seven years ago no one can enter or leave the country with more than $5,000 in his possession unless he files a declaration.

Failure to do so may result in criminal and civil penalties including forfeiture of the money.

Eide could only speculate on the amount that flows undetected across the border but seizures are running about two a month at Blaine and slightly less at Seattle-Tacoma (Seatac) international airport, he said.

The average seizure is $20,000 to $25,000 but one person recently lost nearly a quarter million dollars in cash and negotiable certificates which he failed to declare upon arriving at Seatac from the Far East.

Eide said several Canadians have been caught, including a Vancouver man who was stopped crossing the border at Blaine in his Rolls Royce and was found to be carrying $23,000 in cash. The money and the $65,000 car were seized. The man has launched an appeal.

Eide said the law was passed primarily to stem the illegal laundering of money through foreign banks.

However, he conceded the control measure is only marginally successful as customs officers seldom check persons leaving the country.

He said the majority of cases uncovered to date have involved persons with no criminal connections and who tried to bring in money for a variety of reasons.

Some had been left money in wills of relatives in foreign countries. Others were bringing in money to attend schools or colleges.

If the customs officer feels the excuse is genuine he will allow the person to keep the money after completing a declaration.

But usually the money is seized and the person then has to apply to the customs service for relief, a procedure that can take up to a month to complete.

Whether the person will ever see his money again depends on the custom officer's review of the circumstances.

"If we think the person was trying to pull a fast one on the Internal Revenue branch, he'll be out of luck for sure," Eide said.
